AN EPIDEMIC

"I have my opinion," Mrs. March said impressively, "of folks that don't know no more'n to give a candy pull."

"I don't know but you'd better," Mrs. March said, "if you don't want to get a candy pull."

ROOSEVELT IS ALERT

President Keenly Interested in Political Situation in Pennsylvania. Wants Big Republican Victory.

His Visit to the York County Fair Will Not Be Simply to See the Prize Cattle. (Special Correspondence.)

While it is possible that at the dedication of the new capitol building here the president may not touch upon politics, there is reason to believe that in his remarks subsequently at the York county fair he will make clear his desire for the election of a Republican congress.

It is known that the president has made a number of inquiries regarding political conditions in Pennsylvania, and he has on more than one occasion expressed an earnest wish for the success of the Republican party in this state this fall.

President Roosevelt has taken advantage of several opportunities recently to arouse interest in the Republican cause.

Mr. Roosevelt's Dollar. Anent his subscription to the Republican congressional committee's campaign fund, Editor Charles C. Tuten, of the BeHeffore Republican, has this to say about "Mr. Roosevelt's dollar":

"One of the first to heed the call of the chairman of the Republican campaign committee for one dollar contributions to the campaign fund is President Roosevelt. The president believes in the virtue of example and gives his dollar early with an implied injunction to all Republicans who share with him a true spirit of loyalty to party principle to go and do likewise."

"Naturally this simple device commends itself to the president because of the conditions which have made it necessary. In former times the great corporations were the chief donors of campaign funds, and very little money was obtained from the private in the ranks of the political parties. Largely through Mr. Roosevelt's instrumentality, a death blow has been dealt to the practice of collecting funds from such sources."

THE NATURE KNOW HOW TO KEEP COOL

In Scorching Weather. It is a summer in Italy; the hot, white roads radiate heat as do the blank faces of the houses.

It is interesting to note that while the summer beats down a white heat the death rate from heat prostration is far less in proportion than with us in our more temperate climate, and for the reason that the Italians walk religiously on the shady side of the street, if anything takes them abroad before the cool of the day; and that every man, woman and child for whom it is possible spends the middle of the day in a cool, constant indoors.

Fortunately it is possible for the majority, for during the hot weather many factories give two or three hours for the noonday, and that is why our town presents the appearance of a deserted village.

In the latter part of the afternoon the evening breeze springs up and the town awakes and resumes the work which was begun in the early morning. If you happen to dine in the garden of the Hotel Hotel, or stroll around the garden after dinner, you may, by following up one of the gravel walks, come upon a sort of out of doors room screened off from the garden by close growing cypresses and shaded by tall trees.

An acetylene gas jet sheds a strong light on a table and there, out of doors in the cool of the evening breeze, a man sits at a table and reads. He is heated by two tiny charcoal fires made in earthen braziers, which resemble large square flowerpots. Ammunicia is used to cook his simple meals. In its stockings to heat her four iron. It is doubtful if she has ever seen such a range in her life, for, though she is the cook, she is not kitchen. There is a lesson to be drawn from these two pictures, and that is that we Americans are often sacrificed at the altar of our own prosperity, and go through life wearily carrying on our backs a load of modern improvements.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS. Try Now the Ways of Yore and See How You Like Them. Good old times, says the San Antonio Light, are a delusion and a snare, and the man who sighs for them has little conception of what they were.

The old days are looked backward to affectionately, says the Galveston News, because they were the days of our youth, of bounding blood and supple joints, the days of hope and the days of love and laughter and song. The days of the present will be the good old days of the coming generation and will be regarded by our successors as a sufferer in custom and habits. In many ways, yet will not be to be despised. The progressives of our age are the muckrakers of later era. Fifty years hence we will be accounted as slow and immature as we now regard those of half a century ago.

It is the privilege of posterity to set matters right between those antagonists who by their rivalry for greatness divided a whole age—Addison. Love when true, faithful and well fixed is eminently the sanctifying element of human life. Without it the soul cannot reach its fullest height of holiness—Ruskin. Comfort and independence abide with those who can postpone their desires—Success Magazine.
