Extending Butler.

Butler has become a big town, and with be larger before it is smaller. It is extending in every direction, and will probably continue doing so, and property all about it is becoming valuable.

The Geo. Conrad Schad property, adjoining the town to the north of McKean St., with a frontage on the pike or what will be the extension of Main St., 52 acres, changed hands, last week, for $30,000, as the deed reads. Dr. Showalter and J. V. Ritts are said to be the purchasers, though the deed is made to C. H. Miller.

There is a nice view of the town from the property, and the idea is said to be to extend McKean street through it, with a cross street to Main, and to cut it up into half acre lots for building purposes, and make it the fashionable residence section of the town.

The School Books.

The Text-book Committee of the Bu chool Board is supposed to select, and care for the books, but as a ter of fact the whole business is left the different Principals, who lock them up in the cases provided for them in the different buildings, and with the aid of ent buildings, and with the aid of eachers, keep track of each book, and make requisition for more as needed. About 10,000 books are in the

in all the large towns of the state, nowever, the carrying out of the provis-sions of the free-text-book law required ing of store or supply nt of store-keepers. In Pittsburg, instance, 130,000 books were disnted, last week, from the supply ns of the Central Board of Educa-oms of the Central Board of Educam at the Fifth Avenue High School.

Forty-five thousand drawing books,
000 reading books, 5,000 algebras,
000 sheets of manila paper, half a llion slate pencils, 18,000 rules, 90,000 d pencils, 175 gallons of ink were ong some of the other items of school yplies that were forwarded to the 87 cool buildings of the city and every lding had all its school material on ad with the exception of some alges, which shortage was remedied in te for the reopening of the schools aday.

Wagon loads were delivered to supply the demand.

The use of slates is gradually disappearing in the Pittsburg schools, though nearly 5,000 were distributed to many of the schools as well as half a million eslate pencils. It is expected that eventually slates will be abolished entirely in Pittsburg schools. The quantity of paper used is now on the increase, 3,000 dozen of Pad A (the commonest kind used) is a recent delivery to the schools, with 30,000 common lead pencils to figure and write with. The slate has long been declared unsanitary, as well as unclean.

sing been declared unsanitary, as well as unclean.

Changes were made in the drawing books, readers, algebras and in primary supplementary reading books this year, and the task of receiving, labeling and distributing them to the various schools was one of the biggest (owing to the growth of the schools) that ever confronted the Central Board supply storerom officials.

A text book on drawing is to be placed in the hands of the Pittsburg school children this year. Sixty thousand sheets of manila paper was the order sent in from the ward schools to be used in lieu of the paper drawing books used for years to sketch the forms and figures included in the art school course. No more white drawing paper is being ordered, adull "grozer's gray" paper being substituted. Draughting pencils for shading at $3 a dozen were introduced last year. As these are so expensive they are carefully looked after by the teachers and a set is supposed to last for a long period.

Fifty thousand dollars was the appropriation the Central Board of Education for supplies for each papil has been placed at 35 cents. This summer the store force had to be increased temporarily, owing to the big order of new books to be handled, as readers and algebras have not been changed for five years, and the drawing books now are regular text books and had to be labeilike other books for the first time.

The Boggs' Trolley.

Contracts for the grading were awarded, last week, and the work of grading was begun this week on the Pittsburg. Butler and New Castle trolley line.

Gossip connects the new line with a through line between Pittsburg and Erie, and of this and other matters a Pittsburg paper says:

It is interesting to know how the company effects its entrance into Pittsburg. Several years ago the Allegheny. Evergreen and Millvale Street Railway Co. was chartered to build a line from Evergreen to Millvale starting its line at Evergreen road and East street. The Boggs interests needed this charter to get into Allegheny. so James Bryan, who is the engineer. bought the charter, and, in order to hold it, built almost three quarters of a mile of track, completing the work some time ago, and many persons not conversant with the situation, wondered what was up. By running a branch from this road to Millvale it would give the Pittsburg Railways Co. a loop in the Millvale and Etna territory, and in consideration of the Pittsburg Railways Co. giving the road an entrance into Pittsburg, part of this charter right was sold to the rail-tways company, it is said, and the traffic agreement made whereby the Boggs road can bring its cars to Sixth and Liberty avenues, which will be the terminus of the Butler and New Castle road.

Three members of the State Constabulary and one Italian were killed in a battle Monday night, between the State police and a number of Italians at Florence, Jefferson county.

A policeman went to an Italian boarding house to arrest a man wanted for shooting another, and was himself stabbed and shot.

A telephone call brought fifteen State troopers to the scene, who attacked the house with the above result. The troopers then surrounded the house, a storm came up during which the Italians, excepting the wounded, escaped. Next morning the house was blown up with dynamite and burned, and it is supposed that some dead and wounded Italians burned with it. They are said to be members of the "Black Hand" gang. Two of the men killed lived in the eastern part of the State, and the other, Homer Chambers, at Rochester, Pa.

"When Abner, the son of Ner had been slain by Joab, King David, in the bitterness of his sorrow, said to his servyants: 'Know ye not that there is a Prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel.' With a heart bowed down and a sense of loss that words cannot express, the utterance of King David seems fitting at this time.

"For almost half a century Dr. McCurdy has lived his life among us and no words that we can pen today can add to or detract from that life, but as one honored by his friendship, and helped by his precept and example through all these years, we may lay upon his casket the tribute of gratitude for a noble life and love for an honored friend. How he ministered to the sick in so many of our homes, and when the threatened danger passed, how he rejoiced with us in returning health, we know. When he had exhausted every effort and his skill as a physician seemed not to avail, how he wrestled mightily in prayer with the Great Physician, we know, and when the summons came to some loved one, and a dark cloud of sorrow settled upon the home, how he helped bear the burden, we know. These are the ties that bound him to so many hearts and makes the loss felt in so many homes. But aside from these he had qualities that made him honored.

"As a citizen he always stood for the right. His voice rung true on every moral question, and he had the courage to maintain his convictions. In politics he was a strong partisan, but never followed his party bindly. In matters pertaining to his charfeh, he grag orthodox and stalwart.
