

CARLISLE.

Tuesday, October 24, 1837.

The People's Candidates. FOR PRESIDENT, WM. H. HARRISON. FOR VICE PRESIDENT, FRANCIS GRANGER.

Circumstances have prevented our giving a passing notice, until now, of our having had an opportunity afforded us, through the polite invitation of the head of the institution, of attending the introductory lecture of Professor Allen, of the Chemical and Philosophical Departments of Dickinson College, delivered on Monday, the 9th instant.

Upon entering the chapel—which we did at a very late hour, and consequently lost a portion of the lecture, which we much regret—we were gratified at finding a number of our literati in audience, whose marked attention showed how much they were interested, and from this circumstance and our own observation, we were fully convinced that the task of the Professor was handsomely accomplished.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the President and Professor Allen took us to the apartment containing the philosophical apparatus, lately purchased from Professor Johnson, of Philadelphia. We were much pleased with its appearance, and with the order and neatness with which every thing was arranged. With this apparatus, and such a Professor as Mr. Allen, a student has every opportunity of acquiring scientific knowledge; and which, if not improved, he will in after life deeply regret.

"The Practical Farmer." This is the name of a monthly periodical just issued, by an association of Farmers, edited by D. RUPP. It is in duodecimo size, each number to contain 24 pages. We have looked through the number, and find a variety of articles, which would be interesting and beneficial to the farmer. The following notice we insert for the purpose of promoting the interest of the publication.

"Annexation of Texas." The Editor intends to take an Agricultural Tour, as soon as practicable, with a view to collect information from his Country brethren, on the subject of improvements in farming and Rural Economy. He will organize, wherever it is desirable, Farmers' Societies in different parts of Pennsylvania and other States, to extend as far as possible the circulation of the paper, in order to aid in the furtherance of useful practical knowledge. He bespeaks the cordial co-operation, and solicits the attention of the farmer population, to his enterprise. Wherever meetings may be held, in relation to this subject, he will address them in English, or both the German and English language.

The Editor resides near Mechanicsburg, where a presume, communications may be sent. We have before us the "Knickerbocker," and a "Ladies' Book," for October, both of which exhibit the character for excellence and ability which they have hitherto so well sustained. The Knickerbocker has a number of highly interesting articles, to which we will be glad to devote the leisure hour we can get; and as now the hour and excitement of the election is past, we all have more leisure for attention to our literary department, which it will be our endeavor to make as interesting as possible. We notice in number of the Knickerbocker, the 3d No. of American Antiquities," which reminds us that a August number containing No. 24, has never been issued. It seems that the package for August, signed for Carlisle, has never come to hand. We would be very glad to have ours, and would like the Editor to forward it to us.

We have just received the first and second numbers of the "Oasis," a neat little Monthly of Imperial Octavo size, of 16 pages, published by J. W. Y., for the moderate sum of $1 50 per annum. From a hasty glance at the numbers given, we are very favorably impressed, and think that its title will not prove a misnomer. It has no sense political in its character, but is devoted to "Literature, Science and the Arts," if we may judge from the specimens before us, we would infer that its conductors are capable for the task they have imposed on themselves, that it will be ably performed. We will with assurance send on the names of those of our readers who may be desirous of taking this publication.

Bank of the United States. The United States Gazette gives the following report of the condition of the Pennsylvania Bank of the United States, as exhibited in its October report to the Legislature of the State: The notes of the new bank out, except the post notes at long dates, issued to individuals, amount to $ 601,403 6,175,861 Total $ 6,777,264 specie amounts to $ 3,016,280 he condition which this statement exhibits of concerns of this important institution presents most conclusive and honorable evidence of prudence and pre-eminence ability with which affairs have been conducted by its enlightened and its able colleagues.

Circulation. Bank of the U. States, 6,777,264. 95 banks of the State of New York, 15,039,714. Two Virginia banks & notes, 5,008,692. Total, 17,825,670. 851,663.

Pennsylvania Election.

The authentic and reported returns of the election in this State for members of the lower House of the Legislature, are given in the following table:

Annexation of Texas.

We are indebted to the politeness of the Hon. JOHN SECREAN, for a copy of the correspondence of our government, with the Minister of Texas—as also for other documents—for which he will please accept our thanks.

The first letter is a long and specious document from the pen of Memucan Hunt, the Texas Minister, in which he first gives a "comparative history of Texas and Mexico." As might be expected, he "blackens Mexico," and endeavors to make it appear that in Texas alone was the true Republican spirit maintained. All this is done with a great deal of plausibility, & one would suppose that the Texas were the finest, & not most virtuous of Republics & Patriots, while the Mexicans were the very basest of the base and wholly adverse to liberty. In this long tirade Gen. Hunt forgot—very adversely—to tell us that these tyrannical Mexicans were so much opposed to true liberty, according to Southern ideas of liberty, as to proclaim freedom to every man, and to put himself to disprove our own country; while the Republican Texans with more just and correct ideas of liberty, in their constitution proclaim to the world that man has a right to hold his fellow man in subject slavery. The incongruity of this thing must have been so glaring to Gen. Hunt notwithstanding he knew it would be all power, but with the South. But as our time will not admit of a lengthened notice of this document, we must briefly notice the remainder. Gen. Hunt next promises an union between the United States and Texas, and says all he can in favor of such a measure. To this Mr. Forsythe our Secretary of State, in a comparatively short note, from which we make two extracts on which we will pass a few remarks.

"The question of the annexation of a foreign independent State to the United States, has never before been presented to this government."

"Whether the constitution of the United States contemplated the annexation of such a State, and if so, in what manner that object is to be effected, are questions, in the opinion of the President, it would be inexpedient, under existing circumstances, to agitate."

We have italicized "existing circumstances" for the purpose of drawing the public attention to them. The letter was dated August 25th, at which time it was certainly inexpedient to agitate the question of such annexation on the part of the President; as the elections held in different sections of the country, rendered it exceedingly doubtful; whether he would have a majority to sustain him in annexing Texas to the United States by treaty, against the voice of the people. This mode of accomplishing the wishes of the Texans and Southerners being somewhat novel rendered it necessary to feel the way, and indi-

Resolved, That we learn, with deep regret, of the death of our esteemed fellow-member, Wm. R. H. Gowwin.

Resolved, That in his decease, our association has been deprived of a member alike esteemed for his virtues and respected for his talents. We may expect all matters and things to lie quiet in relation to Texas until after Congress adjourns next Spring. Arson as this takes place Mr. Van-Buren will annex Texas to the Union by treaty, and with closed doors next fall the Senate will forthwith ratify it, and representatives from Texas, who will be on the ground all ready for action, will take their seats in both houses of Congress. Thus in all human probability, the next Congress will open with an overwhelming majority in favor of the South, who will not fail as far as possible, to make the north bite the dust for their opposition to Slavery.

Is the country prepared for such an assumption of power, on the part of Georgia speak out, and in a voice which will shake his seat under him, proclaim to Mr. Van Buren, that he shall not thus trample upon our rights and liberties with impunity. We shall adhere to this subject again.

VERMONT ELECTION.—The official returns have been received, and the Boston Atlas thus sums up the case—

"The Whigs have an increased majority in the Senate. The Whigs have an increased majority in the House. And the Whigs have an increased majority for their Governor."

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO THE EDITORS, DATED NAVY YARD, NEW YORK, October 20th, 1837.

After waiting and wondering for more than three weeks, I was yesterday agreeably relieved by the arrival of several back numbers of "The Herald and Expositor." Have they been transmitted regularly? If so, the agents of Amos Kendall, a set of stupid gascals, must have shown their characteristic negligence in permitting them to remain by the way, or else peradventure they may have been upon an electioneering tour in the Far West, to endeavor to rally the Whigs of that region to the rescue of the "bleeding Constitution."

Wherever they have been or whatever has been their business, the pursuit of them, as ever, affords me much satisfaction. They treat of Carlisle and the region round about—a place endeared to my heart by a thousand pleasing associations, and the recollection of a thousand scenes of unaccustomed delight. I was a youth, 22 years old, penniless, homeless and friendless, when by some decree of mysterious Providence, I became a resident, or rather, perhaps, a transient visitor of that lovely Borough. One short year would not afford me opportunity for cultivating extensive acquaintance, yet even during that time I became the recipient, however humble, of that benevolence—that disinterested friendship—that unobtrusive hospitality, which so amply characterize the inhabitants of that region. When I left, the recollection of past pleasures—past delights—past amusements, not unalloyed, yet rendered more essential by the occasional intervention of adverse fortune, united with the consciousness of the probability that I was taking my final leave, to form a current of irresistible emotion, which rushed upon my mind—with an intensity almost overwhelming. It was about four in the morning, at eleven the previous night, I left forever, a friend to whose name my memory still clings with unyielding tenacity, and retired to bed at Aughlin's, the bar-keeper's cry of "Stag aboy," aroused me, and I prepared for immediate embarkation. The moon had gilded the attitude of heaven's cerulean arch—not a cloud obstructed the tinsel rays of her peerless light, nor a breath of air disturbed the wide prevailing silence. Heaven's starry hosts seemed asleep, while the moon was their wakeful sentinel. I entered the coach. Beside me sat a student of Dickinson College—around me were several passengers of whose presence I was made conscious only by their continued snoring. The rumbling of the stage as it turned the corner at the Court House, and rolled along the turnpike towards Harrisburg seemed the knell of departing joys. I could have wept, but my feelings were too intense. At Hugoburntown I shook old Landford Porter by the hand—wished him success in his clover-seed speculations, and bade him adieu forever. After my friend Clendenin had overhauled Amos Kendall's packages, and the driver had watered his team, we lost little time in gaining Harrisburg. Leaving this place, a pleasant passage to Philadelphia, and the amusing conversation of my sprightly fellow passengers (who, by the way, were no other than Yankee school boys), had a tendency to overcome the melancholy sensibility with which the morning had found me possessed, and when I arrived in New York I had the satisfaction to know that "Richard" was himself again." Such was the scene, and such my emotions when I left Carlisle. If, in view of warm friendship offered, but with a wish of reciprocity—generous hospitality rendered without hope of reward, and the most unbounded kindness manifested towards me as the spontaneous effusion of souls glowing with the best feelings that ever were kindled in the human breast, I am susceptible of any thing like gratitude, towards the sentiment which I still fondly cherish towards those with whom I became acquainted in that region.
