O the stars, Ma, are shining so pretty and bright, And the mild moon is shedding so cheerful a light And the sky looks so pure-so soft is its blue,-I'd love to be up there, O Ma, would'nt you? 11,

You remember maina, when our sweet sister died, And brother and I, wept by her bed side; You fold us her spirit to Heaven would repair, And shine like those pretty bright stars, we see there!

20 Ma, there is one, that I think must be her's-For it seemeth so placid, yet stirs, when I stir: And it smileth so sweetly, as if it might know, The home and the playmates it us'd to love so!

O mother, dear mother! I'd love to go there, And play with my sister, as once I played here That pretty bright star seems to call me away, And the Ma, I love you, I may not here stay!

The invalid spoke, -whilst a tear dim'd the eye Of the mother, as still she gazed up in the sky:-Around her fair child her white arms she hath Thou hast thy wish, lov'd one,-its spirit had
