always employed at the proper moment.-His ordinary tones were low, but distinct; it was only when the feeling or sentiment required it that he became vehement and loud, and rolled on in a voice of thunder. As a preacher, he was very popular wherever he was stationed; and, like Chalmers and Irving, always drew after him large congregations; and those whom he did not convert, he never failed to charm, delight, and edify. He was beloved and admired by all who knew him, both in the pulpit and the social circle. His manner was the very next morning about seven o'clock, Mr. address Jou, or that we shall ever meet bland, unassuming, and attractive, and his piety free from that austerity and asceticism which characterize some who make divinity their profession. Such was the lamented Cookman as a minister of God and pulpit orator. He sleeps the long sleep of death-in-quietude and peace; amid the deep dark waves of the bottomless oceanno longer to mourn over the vices, or to weep for the miseries of mankind. No man could have been better prepared to take the sudden and awful plunge into eternity that he did; to him it was but a transition from a world of sin and woe to one of eternal purity and happiness. He rests on the bosom of his Saviour, but his widowed relict and her helpless offspring, are left to weep in anguish over their irreparable loss.

But let her not weep, her loss has been of the Lying God, the growd that had been his gain the has exchanged a scene of sembled to hear the last sermon of the control and sunt for the derinity of happiweep? can we bring the dead back again? We shall go to them, but they shall not return to us.

> THE FIRST METHODIST PREACHERS. At the commencement of Methodism, they were chosen by Mr. Wesley on account of their knowledge of the scriptures, and powerful, though not often cultivated minds .--Samuel Bradburn, (a man whose life, pubished, would be one of the most interest; ing and even amusing books,) was remy kable for his strong mind; and unwest labor. and conversed with many of them; amongst others, with the three of whom the above story is told; and it must be acknowledged that they were a class of great mental power-rough sometimes, and perhaps a little uncouth, but energetic, self-denying, indomitable. They were often, too, men of great personal strength, and there is current an anecdote of one who was much annoyed on one occasion, by the profanity and impertmence of a gigantic butcher .-For some time he bere patiently with the man's ribaldry; but at last his feelings were outraged, and walking up to the fellow, he took him by the collar, and the waistband of his breeches, as though he had been a little child, and hung him up by the latter to one of the meat hooks in his own shop, where he remained dangling till the exhortation was concluded .- Church of England
