This medicine has a decided advantage over most preparations of the kind, as it regulates the bowels, and strengthens the constitution; and does not bind up the system and encourage intemperance as most of the medicines do, by the fatal opiates al-cohol combined in them. Such medicines have a great tendency to bring misery and distress, and even death upon many valu-able citizens. We find by the weekly records of the bills of mortality, that three fourths of the human souls who so suddenly departed from their dearest friends and relations, have been swept off by that fa-tal and fell destroyer, Consumption, when many could have been saved if they had used a proper medicine. Fellow beings who yet dwell with us, and are afflicted with the premonetary symptoms of this disease, procure immediately, Dr. Dunean's Ex-net without the use of proper medicine; by such negli-gence you may soon be led to know your folly.
