Whether it is likely to be so modified, in its progress, as to be acceptable to the two Houses of Congress, and also to the Executive, our readers will, upon reading the debate, be able to determine for themselves quite as satisfactorily as we can from any information in our possession.

In looking over the more extended reorts of debates in the Senate, we find the Vhig members touching rather lightly on he Exchequer bill as proposed, evincing a desire to do something, but a fear of doing much with the bill in its present shape,while the opposition members are spur and heel against the scheme, and every part of it excepting only that which smacks of the sub-treasury.

The Globe says the Cabinet plan is knocked on the head, and Mr. Clay's plan is knocked on the head, and now the country is to look for a fiscal plan from Mr Rives.—U. S. Guz.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS TO THE PATRONS OF THE Carlisle Herald & Expositor.

January 1, 1842. Come hark'ee neighbor— I'm a poet,
My sout hath sweetest song within it,
Just tarry then, and hear me "go it,"
With "perfect looseness" for a minute.

But stop kind sir,—ere I begin, To spin my yarn in honied rhyme, Hand here a slice of Uncle's " tin," A quarter, levy, or a dime.

Now hear how from my tongue shall roll.
The words,—like duck shot off a shingle—Till I enchant your inmost soul.
With pure, poetic, homespun jingle.

Since last the Carrier's song was sung, How much of change this world hath known! How many bosoms grief hath wrung! How many brightest hopes have flown!

Their sighs and tears have since expended! How many love sick hearts have snapped! How many cracked ones have been mendel! But ah! 'tis sickening to reflect
How crime hath raged throughout our land,
How men who once had gained respect,
Bear on their front the villain's brand.

Bank officers have got to thieving, And robbing widows of their cash, While speculators by their shaving, Have turned our currency to trash.

How many maids by love entrapped

Blind Justice too, has got more blind, And lets the rogues escape her slyly;
They say though, she's made up her mind
To fix her clutches of Bill Wiley.

The thief that breaks the coop at night, Is hobbled, punished and detested,
While he who steals the widows mite
Is too genteel to be molested.

Think not I'm speaking too severely, No quarters can I give to crime, And my opinion is sincerely It triumphs at the present time.

Enough of this. And nown word About the President's fiscality, Twas thought—because so long deferred— The plan would guard 'gainst bank rascality.

My notion is, that after all

It's no great thing—I'm not in fun—
If we're to have a bank at all,

Let's have a good old fashioned one.

Tis thought that cowards need not fear. A fight with Vic. for years to come.
But there's a war now raging here
"Twixt Temperance folks and friends of rum.

Victoria now's too much engaged In getting labbes for her taltert, To let herself become entaged And send against us sword and halberd.

Now dearest friend, Pd bid adicu— But I've a thought I cannot smother, This world's a humbug through and through, Men live by gulling one another.

And surely I may just as well
Turn humbug too—"the more the merrier,"
I're got your money, go and tell
That you've been humbug'd by
