POETRY. THE THINGS THAT ARE. BY MRS. HEMANS. Know'st thou that seas are sweeping Where domes and towers have beeb ? When the clear wave is sleeping, Those piles may yet be seen 3 Far down below the glossy tide, Man's dwellings where his voice hath died ! Know'st thou that flocks are feeding

Know'st thou that flocks are feeding Above the tombs of old, Which kings, their armies leading, Have lingered to behold ? Know'st thou that now the token Of cities ance renowned, Is but some pillar broken, With grass and wall flowers crowned ; While the lone serpent rears her young Where the triumphant lyre has rung ?

Well, well I know the story Weil, weil i know the story Of ages, passed away, And the mournful wrecks that glory Hath left to dull decay, But thou hast yet a tale to learn, More full of warnings, sad and stern.

Thy pensive eye but ranges Through ruined fane and hall--Oh ! the deep soul hath changes More sourowful than all ! Talk not, while these before thee throng; Of silence in the place of song.

Sea Scorn, where Love hath perished, Distrust, where friendship grew; Pride, where once nature cherished All tender thoughts and true; And shadows of oblivion thrown O'er overy trace of idols gone.

Grieve not for tombs far seattered. For temples prostrate laid ; In thise own heart lie shattered Thealtars it had ma ie ! Go, sound its depths in doubt and fear-Heap up no more its treasures here!
