"With the last week's number our connexion the "Herald & Expositor" ceased. We shall pare our Books, that our friends, at their nience, can call at the office and discharge r subscription accounts. What is due for Adctising and jobbing, would come very convennt to us at the present time.

Six months ago, when we took charge of this Establishment, it was our design, as well as our wish, to make Carlisle our permanent residence. Our whole exertions up to a few weeks past, were directed to that end.

It is with regret-deep regret-however that circumstances have occurred to compel us to sever that connexion with the people of Cumberland county which was becoming every day more enlarged and more pleasant and agreeable.

When we left Lancaster, we thought our ar rangements had been so made that our pecuniary affairs there would not require our personal attention. We have been deceived, and now find that we must either give up the Herald of suffer a loss too great to be borne with justice to the interested of those dependent upon us for support.

We have, however, the consolation of saving to our patrons that the Establishment has been placed in hands that will well sustain it. Mr. Bur-Lut, the gentleman who succeeds us, is a practical Printer-having served an apprenticeship in the office of the Village Record, -a young man of good attainments, and of one of the best families of Chester county. We bespeak for him the kind confident that he will please those for whom it will he his duty and pleasure hereafter to cater.

To those who have, in our short soiourn among them, evidenced a disposition to support and sustain us we here tender our thanks and kind wishes for their happiness. To our neighbour, we offer the right hand of fellow-ship, wishing him much prosperity, and that his "shadow may never grow The public's servant,

It will be observed by the above that the control of the "Herald & Expositor" will hereafter devolve upon the undersigned.

But, desiring rathor that our future actions may be made a standard of judgment by which we may be fully known, than any professions which we might at present make, we presume it is necessary for us ability. to say little more than that we have ever felt a warm and zealous desire for the promulgation and triumph of those principles which elevated to the Presidency the great and good Harrison. And that we do not feel our interest in the least decreased, or our ardor in any way abated, by the great calamity which came upon the country like a blighting mildew upon the ripening harvest, and the party which contended for those principles, by the death or that long and well tried man in whom were centered their cherished hopes of many years. We do not feel discouraged at circus will yet triumph. what has happened us, however great may be regret. We do not feel disheartened, because one great effort has been frustrated-because the individual whom the Democratic Whig party had elevated to the highest station in the gift of effect a change in the administration of our General Government has, by the divine interposition of Provide tice been taken away, and a man, designed for an he ferior station, called through provision of the Courts to occupy his place, and who instead of carrying out in the adminhe had repeatedly professed by word and action, and those entertained by his prodecessor, turned traitor to those to whom he owed his elevationmost chickvors to defeat nearly all the great measures for which they contended.

These things we say have not in the slightest degrea discouraged us; neither should they dis which order was published in our paper of last courses any-one. If the principles for which week. we contended, and under whose banner we conquered had been carried out in the administration of the General Government, and the manufacturing and agricultural interests; and the financial ranged and injurious condition they now are, then indeed should we have cause for regret—for Insting dismay. But it is not so, and what has heard that in the public places of our town, the jority. befalled us should but nerve us for renewed action individuals who composed the meeting above al-_alfould but kindle anow in our bosoms the fires luded to, have been designated by some of the of patriotism and arge us on to redoubled effort.
