To has Quilarcy Adams at Home.

RECEPTION BY HIS CONSTITUENTS.

We neglected to notice at the proper time, the constituents of John Quincy Adams upon his return to them from his duties in Congress. But it can nover be too late for any thing which relates to this veter an, time-honored and beloved statesman, every wild provoked them to hear. But the truth is, no day of whose life almost is a page of our country, history—the "old man cloquent," who with his life almost is a page of our country, history—the "old man cloquent," who with his life bending under the weight of seventy years, and having filled every station of seventy years, and having filled every station of trust and confidence from the humble State Representative up ed, alth to the highest in the people's gift, the Presidency of the United States, is still in his country's service as a Representative in Congress, battling with the vigor of youth for Northern rights against Southern bravado and insolence-the unconquere champion of the right of Petition and the freedom of speech. As remarked by the gentleman who wellowed him, the course of the Sun is the fittest emblem of his illustrious life—"bright at its dawn brighter in its meridian—and going down in were not realized—for a distribution bill was also glory"—and

"Till the Future darcs
Forget the Past, his fame shall be
An echo and a light unto Eternity."

The 17th of September was the day appointed of music accompanying, marched to one of the of my life. churches, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion with banners on which were expressive inscriptions. On one of them was inscribed,

Welcome! Defender of the Right of Petition. After some preliminaries Mr. ADAMS was received on the stage in front of the pulpit, by the Hon, Mr. Davis of Plymouth, who addressed him in behalf of his constituents. The following is an extract from Mr. Davis's address :

" Permit me, sir, to congratulate you on you "Formit me, sir, to congratulate you on your safe return to your home, after the toilsome duties of a protracted and stormy session, and to assure you that the multitude gathered here to-day have come to bid you welcome. Assembled at Braintree, the birth place of your father, our thoughts naturally recur to his and your eminent public services. It has fallen to you to sustain and to cherish those institutions which he in so eminent a degree contributed to establish. When we review your active services of more than half emment a degree contributed to establish. When we review your active services of more than half a century, abroad and at home, in courts and in council, as chief magistrate and as representative, we are dazzled with their splendor and overwhelmed by their magnitude. Who, now, sir, doubts the wisdom and the purity of your administration? No experiments were then tried upon the public presents. No decrease a superior then who no experiments were then tried upon the public prosperity. No disordered currency then embarrassed trade. No paralyzing vetoes, the offspring of self will and delusion, obstructed legislation. The constitution was not then set at defiance under the shallow pretext of obeying a blind and selfish personal conscience, nor was the patronage of the government, as has since beau, perverted and squandered to encourage and reward parti-zan services. But great as were your services as chief magistrate, I hardly know if they were greater, certainly they were not more arduous or meritorious, than your recent services as fepresentative in Congress. Your brightest glories have been your last. Your course has been like that of the sun-bright in its rising, splendid in its meridian, glorious in its decline.

Upon the conclusion of this address. Mr. Adams who rose upon its commencement and stood during the delivery, began his address in a scarcely audible voice. As he proceeded thanking his constituents for their long continued and most generous support during scenes of great trial, he manifested deep emotion, and the voice which nover faltered when hurling the thunder of its cloquence at the betrayers of the people's trusts, in the councils of the nation, now, here among his own fire-side friends and neighbors, trembled, as it gave utterance to his feelings of gratitude, for their cordial and undeviating sympathy and

Mr. Adams proceeded—When I was invited to this meeting, it occurred to me' that while it would give me the pleasure of thanking you for our long continued kindness, it would also afford me the opportunity to review and lay open before you the course of administration, from my first election to Congress hitherto, not only in its outward professions and measures, but in its secret purposes. I shall confine my remarks to a few of the most important topics. My friend Mr. Appleton, in his late letter to his constituents, that lifted a corner of the veil and given a glimpse.

Rock, that ever graced the annals of even that district whose every rock and hill and river is works are propelled by the Yellow Breeches Creek and the Boiling Spring, which neither fail no freeze. There are upon the premises all the necessary workments houses, coal houses, carpenter and smith shops, and stabling built of the most substantial materials. The ore of the best quality and inexhaustible, is within 2 miles of the Furnace. There is perhaps in lorn Works in Pennsylvania which possesses superior advantages and offers greater inducements to the investment of Capital. The water power is so great that it might be extended to any other manufacturing purpose. Persons disposed to purchase will of course examine the property. The terms of sale will be made known by MARY EGE, lifted a corner of the veil and given a glimps at the secret springs of government policy—that policy which had for its object to elevate South Carolina and slavery to the throne of the Union. In that letter Mr. Appleton and the Carolina and slavery to the throne of the Union. In that letter Mr. Appleton says, "nullification, carefully prepared statement. We have seperation, and the forty-bate theory has passed a secretained that out of the 1,060 townships away. They have, in a certain sense, passed a in the State, returns in relation to the manway. They have, in a certain sense, passed a lib die State, retained in the way. The palmette standard is not now arrayed ufacture of Iron have been received from against the standard of the Union: S. Cafolina only 669. In these there are 104 air and is not now in rebellion. (He here read from the cupola furnaces, 30 rolling mills, 32 steam offly, one in the best of Saturday morning; and extract from a Charleston paper, the purport of which was, that Mr. Callbun's party would either repeal the tariff, or nullify.) This is the way nullification has passed away. Believe me, nullification has passed away. Believe me, nullification has neither changed its name, nor relented in its purposes. Nullification is the acting President's conscience. It is the secret of his vettes and forces, and his reasons. I would wish to speak of the and his reasons. I would wish to speak of the and factories, and in those in the townships President with all the respect to which his deed from which no returns have been received, dental office and his reconst demestic afficient on title him. I would feira spare his public charac. design of the search as recont connection outside him. I would feign spare his public character, out of respect for his private virtues. But the additional value given to it by mechanical ing—the sin which brought Charles the First millions of dollars! to the block. I cannot forgive his duplicity.

It may be thought that I owe you an apology for my course respecting the President. In my settles, accepting your nomination, I stated that I would support the President of the United States, whenever, and as far as in my judgment I could do so with propriety, and such I conceive to be the duty of a representative. But I have usually, it is true, been found in opposition to the President, though not uniformly so, as for example, in the case of the difficulty with France, during General Jackson's administration. I took during General Jackson's administration, I took strong ground as you may remember, in defence tive consumption of British manufactures of the President. But still, in the main, I have in other countries, are calculated to awadiffered with the administration for the time, being. As to President Tyler, I became satisfied within one month after his accession to the Presidency that his re-election to that office would constitute the point on which his administration would turn. Nevertheless, at the breaking up of the Cabinet upon the veto of the bank bill, (though I was glad of thativeto, not because of the grounds it was based upon, but because the assent of the States was, required,). I was one of the Massachusetts delegation with whom Mr. Wobb atter consulted and I steemed with the states worth; each Frenchcontinue at his base was required.) I was one of the Massachusetts delegation with whom Mr. Web Sacronsuled, and I strongly advised him to continue at his post. I thought the danger of war with Great Ritting, at that time, to be iminated—and I therefore advised him to continue at his post. The danger has now happilly passed as way—and there is perhaps no other citizen who could have brought the negociation to a favorable termination, and saved us from belong plunged into a war with England. Yet though such was my advice to the Secretary of State, I was saits, field the very moment I tolowed at the estimates fold the very moment I tolowed at the estimates for discinuate achiling for 33, 900,000. of dellars for regional to a war spendence for the late asson of the country with British and French and the second of the late asson of Congress, that I must come out in open opposition to the French of the world of the country with British and French of the surp is the part of the country with British and French of the surp is the part of the country with British and French of the surp is the part of the country with British and French of the surp is the part of the country with British and French of the country of the surp is the part of the country of the surp is the part of the country and the part of the country of the country and the part of the country of the country and the part of the country and the part of the country of the

Perhaps my vote on the Tariff Bill may require personal explanation here. I am glad that it pass ed. although I voted steadily against it; and I think the Whigs did right to pass it. But I thought the distress which the postponement of a tariff until the next seasion of Congress would occasion would be of short diviation, while I regarded the distribution as a permanent and most important principle—and I believed that if once bandoned, it would be abandoned forever. I would not, therefore, in view of all I had said and all I had written, avertantemporary distress by passed, detached and by itself, and by considerable majoricis. Yet the President put it in his pock-here on the Right of Petition—a right most dear a I am aware, to you, and most vital to the country. But I have done all I could to account for the ceremonies in honor of Mr. Adams and the meeting with his constituonts, at the town of Weymouth, Mass. An immense concourse of people of both sexes, accordingly assembled on the occasion, and forming a procession with a band that right, but in vain. It has been denied you—and I have no hope that I can do any thing effectual during the brief term of service which remains to me as your Representative to regain it. Could I do so, I would esteem it the chief glory

My career as your representative is now closed Let me end as I began, with my thanks to you for your constant and uniform support for so long a period and on so many trying occasions. I can never more be the Representative of Plymouth Rock-but my prayers shall never cease to ascend for your prosperity and your happiness."

'At the close of Mr. Adams' address, resolutions approving of his course, firmly asserting the sacred right of petition, and denying any unconntituional interference with the rights of any State, were read bythe Hon. Seth Sprague, Jr .-The following original Ode was then sung after which the assembly broke up:

Not from the bloody field, Borne on his battered shield, By foes o'er come, But, from a sterner light; In the defence of Right Clothed in a Conqueror's might We hail him home.

Where Slavery's minions lower, Before the servile power, He broke the ban: And, like an aged oak, That braved the lightning's stroke When thunders round it broke,

Stood up, A MAN. Nav--when they stormed aloud. And round him like a cloud. Came, thick and black, He single-handed, strove, And, like Olympian Jove, With his own thunder, drove,

The phalanx back. No leafy wreath we twine, Of oak, or Isthmian plue, To grace his brow; Like his own locks of gray, Such leaves would fall away, As will the grateful lay

We weave him now. But time shall touch the page, And tell how Quincy's sage, . Has dared to live, Save as he touches wine, Or Shakspeare's glowing line, Or Raphael's forms divine, New life to give.

Thus ended one of the proudest days for the descendents of the settlers of Old Plymouth and necessary TENANT HOUSES, The
