THE CARLEND.

From the Louisville Journal.

HARRY OF THE WEST.

And the halcyon days of his life.

For his sword was in justice and liberty's name.

And liberty's hand, with myrtle has crowned it.

He has mounted on high to the patriot's sky.

While his name was last in the heart and the sight.

But joy! that the hero has gone to his rest.

His mantle is left to the hope of the West.

He shall wear in glory, in honor, and power,

In the temple of abstraction, of knaves, and of treason.

And the veil shall tremble, the sword shall cover.

Epiphany lights that flutter this season.

Yes, the noble and great in the forum of States.

By the distum of freedom, the fate of fate.

Shall rule over the land that his labors have blessed.

Our Harry, the dauntless, the pride of the West!

He has stood like a rock when the tempest has roared,

And the gallant have trembled at dangers surrounding.

'Mid the war of great minds his spirit has soared,

In the triumph of genius the proudest confounding.

The Tyrant's strong chain he has riven amain,

Then witness fair Greece and Columbia's plain;

Dear to our hearts with the noblest and best.

We'll shrine him our Harry, the hope of the West!

Look o'er the proud scroll of your glorious names,

From the light of day through the lapse of ages.

To souls that were honor's, and virtue's and fame's.

Whose fire and devotion illumine the world's page.

Then turn in your pride where the whole are allied.

To the Statesman yielding, to the patriot guide.

And yet, while your gratitude beams all expressed.

To Harry, our glory and Star of the West!

Fill, fill to the brim in the lymph of your springs,

And toast him for Liberty's peerless defender.

And bear his eye, beacons, on wandering wings.

Who ever against him has splendor.

Our banner unfurled it shall beam the world.

Till the Dragon of doubt and Abstraction is hurled.

And we throne in his place whom the country loves.

—Best—

Our Harry, the glory and pride of the West.

THE COAL RING, OR, THE TEMPERANCE PLEDGE.

BY MRS. H. B. STOWE.

"There is no time of life in which young girls are so thoroughly selfish as from fifteen to twenty," said Edward Ashton, deliberately, as he laid down a book he had been reading, and leaned over the centre table.

"You insulting fellow!" replied a tall brilliant-looking creature, who was lounging on an ottoman hard by, over one of Dickens's last works.

"Truth, coz—for all that," said the gentleman, with the air of one who means to provoke a discussion.

"Now Edward, this is just one of your wholesale declarations—for nothing only to get me into a dispute with you, you know," replied the lady. "On your conscience, now, (if you have one,) is it not so?"

"My conscience feels quite easy, cousin, in subscribing to that very sentiment, as my confession of faith," replied the gentleman, with provoking sang froid.

"Palmy—it's one of your fustly old bachelor notions. See what comes, now of living to your time of life without a wife—disrespect for the sex, and all that.—Really, cousin, your symptoms are getting alarming."

"Nay, now, cousin Florence," said Edward, "you are a girl of moderately good sense, with all your nonsense—now don't you (I know you do) think just so too?"

"Think just so too!—do her creature!" replied Florence. "No, sir; you can speak for yourself in this matter, but I beg leave to enter my protest when you speak for me too."

"Well, now, where is there, coz, among all our circle, a young girl that has any sort of purpose or object in life to speak of, except to make herself as interesting and agreeable as possible—to be admired, and to pass her time in an amusing way as she can? Where will you find one between sixteen and twenty, that has any serious regard for the improvement and best welfare of those with whom she is connected at all, or that modifies her conduct in the least with reference to it? Now, cousin, in very serious earnest, you have about as much real character, as much earnestness and depth of feeling, and as much good sense, when one can get at it as any young lady of them all; and yet, on your conscience, can you say that you live with any sort of reference to any body's good—or to anything but your own present amusement and gratification?"

"What a shocking adjuration," replied the lady, "prefaced, too, by a three-fold compliment! Well, being so adjured, I must think to the best of my ability. And I am serious—I do all that I have any occasion to do, for any body. You know that we have servants to do every thing that is necessary about the house, so that there is no occasion for my making a display of domestic industry."

"I wish you would be serious, and speak of your own improvement, and of your own mind, and of your own soul, and of your own future life, and of your own eternal destiny, and of your own immortal soul, and of your own immortal spirit, and of your own immortal glory, and of your own immortal happiness, and of your own immortal bliss, and of your own immortal life, and of your own immortal love, and of your own immortal joy, and of your own immortal peace, and of your own immortal rest, and of your own immortal glory, and of your own immortal happiness, and of your own immortal bliss, and of
