For the Carlisle Herald and Expositor. Ma. Enrrou :- The following remarks are set to you, with the hope that if you think proper to pubto promote the object contemplated, viz: The art of articulating and pronouncing our language with more propriety and exactness, than what we daily witness around us. Should this, in any degree be the case, your correspondent will be ab compensated for any pains he may have taken, it preparing them for general consideration.

To correct prevalent mistakes either in theory or practice: to point out an error in received opinions, On any subject relating to arts, sciences or religion, can never be altogether useless, and may eventually lead to general improvement.

The following observations may, perhaps, seem to some of your readers rather trivial, yet it is hoped that persons, those especially, who are engaged in the important task of communicating instruction to others, will pay them some attention.

It is, as I conceive, the business of every individual, to acquire some knowledge of the language of the country wherein he was born; and likewise to pronounce it in such a way as to be most easily understood, when he would convey his ideas to the mind of another. That pronunciation is said to be the best, and should be preferred, which gives to all parts of the word a full and distinct articulation. The ear likes to be pleased; and in order to gratify it, some attention should be given to the modulation of the voice, by laying the emphasis on the proper syllable in each word, and pronouncing the last part of the word, and likewise the end of each sentence or paragraph, distinct and full.

But a practice the very reverse is becoming prevalent, and has, I fear, been gaining ground for some years; and that, not morely among the vulgar, but even among the higher classes, and the more intelligent in life, not excepting some of our most distinguished public Lecturers. Indistinct articulation renders the speaker unintelligible, or, demands more than ordinary attention, and consequently is painful to the hearer. One great source of this evil is, the throwing back the syllabic emphasis towards the beginning of the word, which has no foundation in our language, and must to a judicious, refined, and harus ear, produce the most discordant sounds :-as the latter part of the word is pronounced with precipitancy, and therefore is indistinct, or scarcely audible at all, and a kind of gibberish, or something extremely repulsive is substituted in its room. This. to say the least, deprives our language of a great part of its native force of expression; for words have a posuliar energy, and several emotions of the mind are strongly marked by the full force of the

I heard a gentleman some time ago, when pronouncing the word opponent, lay the emphasis, on the first syllable, and another on the first, in diploma; another, when in the Pulpit, laid it very loudly, on the first syllable in the word offences; and another, on the second, in disrepute; and another, on the third, in influences. There is a sort of contagion in this respect, as well as in many other things, and it is to be feared that the disease as not only epidemical but

Permit me, Mr. Editor, to give you one or two instances more of this defectiveness of pronunciation, to general, and which might be indulged in to an almost indefinite extent. Very recently I heard a word in it/"waft, waft," in a very broad and rustick" manner, as, wauft, wauft, and with as much propricty and elegance, as if he had said, vauft, for vaft, vaut, for vat, maun for man, haund, for hand. Also, at the last criminal court held in this borough, I heard a public speaker at the bar, a Lawyer of no. occasion, I would merely suggest, that as the Pulpit and the Bar are looked up to as furnishing models of correct pronunciation and delivery, to the gentlemen connected with those professions in particular, the propriety of forming some such plans and rules respecting pronunciation and a due modulation of the oice,as may render their efforts more agreeable and To acquire a competent knowledge of our language is indeed a task more difficult than many are aware of; and however paradoxical it may appear, yet it is a fact that few comparatively, even of those who have acquired a classical education, and have subsequently graduated at our Law Schools and Theological Seminaries, are enabled to read and write our own language with propriety, according to the received rules of phraseology and rhetorick. Many societies have been recently formed for the most laudable purposes, and have been attended with inestimable good. Why then, do not some of the most judicious and best refined among the literati, join heartily in an attempt to prevent the rapid degeneracy of our native tongue. If any general good may be expected it must begin with youth. I would therefore recommend, that every teacher, from the one who begins with the alphabet, and moulds the infant organs to syllabic sounds, with every other order of instructers in our public schools and seminaries, up to the learned Tutors and Professors in our Colleges, bestir themselves, and setting aside and discountenan ing every finical, artificial and affected air of speech, endeavour, if possible, to restore our native language, to its former simplicity, beauty, energy, dignity and empliatic expression

The Farmer.

Those who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God, whose breasts he has made his peculiar deposite for substantial and genuine virtue. -Jefferson.

Drive on, thou sturdy farmer, Drive cheerily o'er the field; The pleasures of a farmer's life No other life can yield.

Thou risest with the morning sun,
To till the fruitful earth;
And when thy daily task is done
Thou seek'st the peaceful hearth.

Thou lovest not the gaudy town With-its tumultuous roar; Plenty and Peace thy fireside crown, And thou dost ask no more.

'Generation after generation,' says an loquent modern writer, have felt as we feel, and their fellows were as active in life an almost indefinite extent. Very recently I heard a Clergyman, when reading Bishop Heber's beautiful as ours now. They passed away as a va-Missionary Hymn to his congregation, articulate the por, while Nature wore the same ospect of beauty as when her Creator commanded her to be. And so likewise, shall it be when we are gone. The heavens will be as bright over our grave as they are now heard a public speaker at the bar, a Lawyer of nomean reputation as a scholar, very distinctly and repeatedly say, Peteraecs case, instead of Peters same attraction for offspring yet unborn that she had once for ourselves, and that she had once for ourselves, and that she had once for our children. Yet a little, and all this will have happened! The numerable instances to show it. But on the present throbing heart will be stilled, and we shall be at rest. Our funeral will wind on its way, and the prayers will be said and the grave-clods will be thrown in, and our friends will all return and we shall be left behind in darkness and the worm. And impressive to a correct, refined and cultivated taste. it may be for some short time we shall be spoken of, but the things of life will creep in, and our names will soon be forgotten. Days will continue to move on, and laughter and song will be heard in the very chamber in which we died; and the eye that mourned for us will be dried and will again glisten with joy; and even our children will cease to think of us, and will cease to lisp our name. Then shall we have become in the language of the Psalmist, 'forgotten and clean out of mind!'-Knickerbocker.

Literature.

NE of the distinguished features of the day is the multiplication of CHEAP BOOKS. Publications of this kind have been hitherto confined, with a few exceptions, to works entirely nugatory in point of good morals or positively injurious to them. The subscriber proposes the publication of a Monthly Library, in which he will offer to the notice of the community a series of works of another character, which, from the high price at which they are held, are almost scaled books, except to the wealthy. The first of the Series will be D'Aubigne's History of the great Reformation in Germany & Switzerland. At this time, when the efforts of the Roman Catholic clergy to extend their religious, and as many believe civil sway over our country, are so untiring, the general diffusion of this work cannot but be advantageous to the cause of civil and religious freedom. The historian has dischared his task with singular fidelity and ability. The everyarying scenes of that eventful period pass before the eye in the most vivid manner, producing effects as far surpassing in interest as in truth, the highest efforts of dramatic skill. The characters of Luther and the other leading Reformers, as well as those of the champions of ing Reformers, as well as those of the champions of the church of Rome, are depicted with a force that imparts to them the reality and beauty of the most masterly paintings. They "live, move, and have a heing," though centuries have elapsed since they played their part in the most eventful drama of mod-ern ages.

This work has the commendation of the Protes tant clergy of both our own country and Europe and passed through several editions, even in its present costly form. It will be published in five monthly numbers, each containing about 200 pages of the American book copy, and at one-sixth the price of the present edition. The first number was issued about the first of January. The present work will be followed by others of a similar character.
