French Claims

For several years prior to 1800, says the N. Y Tribune, the National vessels and privateers of that Country, plundered and preyed upon the peated and urgent demands on France for indemnity but obtained none. Finally, Mr. Jefferson bought Louisiana of France, paying $15,- 1843. 000,000 in cash, and giving in addition a "full satisfaction" for these spoliations. In other words, our Government sold the claims of our Citizens on France, and put the money in its own pocket, instead of the pockets of the claimants, whose property had been taken by France, and to care, and the management of my worldly concerns. whom it belonged. Our Government of course | cerns. whom it belonged. Our Government of course became legally and morally responsible to the will come again to this earth—cleanse, purify, became legally and morally responsible to the between the between March 21, 1843, and March 21, 1844. I have never, for the space of more than twenty-three years had any other time, between the between that time. I have never found any mistake own Treasury have petitioned and begged for payment in vain! They were a few powerless merchants—most of them of opposite pulities to the Federal Administrations of 1804-16—and they were left to whistle. If they had had a wholly on that blessed book for my faith in this hundred thousand votes at their back, they would hundred thousand votes at their back, they would trave been paid long ago. Now most of them have gone to their graves—others are in the Poor Houses; and the sad remainder are old and feeble;

New Tostaments. These have been and now who cares for them? We know one widow who ashamed of them.

As to worldly cares, I have had but very few render her independent for life—yet she is living for 12 years past. I have a wife and eight children i I have great reason to believe they are all the children of God and believers in the same relative; part the product of her constant labor. relative; part the product of her constant labor.

And we see by the vote in the House on Friday that Congress never means to pay a farthing of selves upon it, and I believe they are esteemed these claims! Why should they be paid? They are only honest and righteous, without a cannon or a Presidential Elector to back them! Let the claimants subsist on charity, while Congress dis. and kind to all men who need their sympathy cusses the repayment of a fine to Gen. Jackson !

President Tyler's Message ON THE FINANCES.

The Speaker laid before the House the follow ing message from the President of the United States, viz: To the House of Representatives.

I hereby transmit to the House of Represen tatives a report made to me on the 9th inst: by the Secretary of the Trensury, on the subject of the present and prospective condition of the fi-

You will perceive from it that evon if the re ccipts from the various sources of revenue for the current year shall prove not to have been overrated, and the expenditures be restrained estimates, the Treasury will be exthausted before the close of the year, and that this will be the case, although authority should port. Last year there were 183 districts which had be given to the proper Department to re-issue Treasury notes. But the state of facts existing at the present moment cannot fail to awaken a doubt whether the amount of the revenue for the respective quarters of the year will amount to the estimates, nor is it entirely certain that the expenditures which will be authorized by Congress, may not exceed the aggregate sum, which has hitherto been assumed as the basis of the Treas-

Of all the duties of the Government none is more sacred and imperative than that of making adequate and ample provision for fulfilling, with and 9 days; the number of male teachers, 5176; and punctuality, its pecuniary engagements and maintaining the public gredit inviolate. Any failure in this respect, not produced by unforseen causes, could not but be regarded by our common constituents as a serious neglect of the public interests. I feel it, therefore, to be an indispensable obligation, while so much of the session yet remains unexpired as to enable Congress to give to the subject the consideration which its great importance demands, most earnestly to call its attention to the propriety of making further provision for the public service of the year.

The proper objects of taxation are peculiarly within the discretion of the Legislature, but it is the duty of the Executive to keep Congress duly advised of the state of the Treasury, and to admonish it of any danger which there may be ground to apprehend of a failure in the means of neeting the expenditures authorized by law. I ought not, therefore, to dissemble my that there will be a serious falling off in the esti-mated proceeds, both of the customs and public lands. I regard the evil of disappointment in these respects as altogether too great to be risked, if by any possibility, it may be entirely obviated.

While I am far from objecting under present circumstances, to the recconfinendation of the Secretary, that authority be granted him to reissue Treasury notes, as they shall be redeemed, and other suggestions which he has made upon the subject, yet it appears to me to be worthy of grave consideration, whether more permanen and certain supplies ought not to be provided. The issue of one note in the redemption of a-nother is not the payment of a debt, which can only be made, and must be made in the end, by ome form of public taxation.

I cannot forbear to add that in a country so full of resources of such abundant means, if they be but judiciously called out, the revenues of the Government, its credit, and its ability to fulfil all its obligations, ought not to be made dependent on temporary expedients, or on calculations of an un-The public foith in this as in all things else ought to be placed beyond question and pevond Contingency.

The necessity of further and full provision for supplying the waits of the Treasury will be the more urgent, if Congress, at its present session, should adopt no plan for facilitating the financial operations of the Government and improving the currency of the country.

By the aid of a wise and efficient—incasure of that kind, not only would the internal business and prosperity of the country be revived and invigorated, but important additions to the amount of revenue arising from importations might also be confidently expected. Not only does the present condition of things, in relation to currency and commercial exchanges, produce severe and distressing embarrassments in the business and pursuits of individuals, but its obvious tendency is to create also a necessity for the imposition of of new burdens of taxation, in order to secur the Government and the country against discredit; from the failure of means to fulfil the public D'Aubigne's History of the great Reformation in Germany & Switzerland.

At this time, when the efforts of the Roman Catholic clergy to extend their religious, and as many helieve civil sway over our country, are so untiring, the general diffusion of this work cannot but be advantageous to the cause of civil and religious freedom. The historian has dischared his task with singular fidelity and ability. The evervarying scenes of that eventful period pass before the eye in the most vivid manner, producing effects as far surpassing in interest as in truth, the highest efforts of dramatic skill. The characters of Luther and the other leading Reformers, as well as those of the champions of the church of Rome, are depicted with a force that imparts to them the reality and beauty of the most masterly paintings.
