securing the services of competent and faithful teachers. Other measures will be Leneficial only sofar as they tend to effect this. Systems ma be devised ; funds appropriated ; large and com-modious school houses creeted; and the provisions mon schools will prove ineffectual.

The Superintendent, is therefore, gratified at free. being able to state, that so far as his observation has extended, the present school law is bringing forward a body of teachers, superior, both in moral character and literary attainments, to those employed before the adoption of the system. The public has been in some degree awakened to the necessity of having competent teachers the qualifications form a more frequent subject of disussion -- and more correct opinions have been formed as to what constitutes a suitable instruc stered. of skill in his calling; while the negligent and incompetent are compelled to give place to those better fitted for the office.
