At last the father resolved upon a final and desperate expedient, by which his end should be gained or his daughter ruined, so far as her prospects in this life were concerned. A large company of the nobility were invited to his house. It was so arranged that during the festivities the daughters of different noblemen, and among others, this one, were to be called on to entertain the company with singing and music on the piano. If she complied, she parted with heaven, and returned to the world; If she refused compliance, she would be publicly disgraced, and lose, past the possibility of recovery, her place in society. It was a dreadful crisis, and with peaceful confidence did she await it. As the crisis approached, different individuals, at the call of the commany, performed their parts with the greatest applause. At last the name of his daughter was unnounced. In a moment all were in fixed and silent suspense to Without hesitation she rose, and with a place at the instrument. THE ROSE. -I saw a rose perfect in beauty; it rested gracefully upon its stalk, and its perfume filled the air. Many stopped to gaze upon it, and bowed to faste its fragrance, and its owner hung over it with delight. I passed it again, and behold it was gone-its stem was leafless-its root. nad withered-the enclosure which surrounded it was broken down. The spoiler had been there; he saw that many admired it; he knew it was dear to him who planted it, and beside it he had no other plant to love. Yet he snatched it secretly rom the hand that cherished it; he wore t on his bosom till it hung its head and faded, and, when he saw that its glory was departed, he flung it rudely away. But it left a thorn in his bosom, and vainly did he seek to extract it; for now it pierces the the spoiler even in his hour of mirth. And when I saw that no man, who had loved the beauty of the rose, gathered again its scattered leaves or bound up the stalk which. the hand of violence had broken, I looked earnestly at the spot where it grew, and my soul received instruction.
