OBITUARY. ed, from abourd a Steamboat, near the mouth do River, on the 27th of October, CHARLES A n of Mr. Alexander C. Gregg, larely of Carlisle

Drawned, fromaboard a Sicamboat, mear the month of the Ohio River, on the 27th of October, Chranles A. eldekis son of Mr. Alexander C. Greggs larely of Carlisle; in the 23d year of bis age.

The melancholy flate of this interesting and promising sound man, has spread mourning through a thurmgrous circle of his relatives and friends, anternastired the deepest syn pathies of this whole community; where he and his family have been long'known, and inversally respected and beloved.

He had but just left this place, in company with his parents and family, and was on his way, yith them, to the Western country.

He went forth, high in hope and buoyant in spirit, and farring no evil. Hardy and vigorous in body fearless and cheerful in temper, he laughed at toll and privation. Intelligent and well-informed, and endowed with a sound moral and religious principle, he promised to become a most efficient citizen and useful member of society in any community where he might settle. But it has pleased the Great Dispenser of all things to cut him down prematurely and thus frustrate the hopes and expectations willchaver confidently enter-tuined as to his subsequent career. We would humbly, unexly bow to the root of the Clustener, and confession to the subsequent career. We would humbly, unexly bow to the root of the Clustener, and confession will flow form young and old, who have known and vice will fill the confession faith will look up through the reas a though his cast; human affection will still moorn on; but Christian Faith will look up through the reas work.

They who sorrow over the departed, mourn him not as those who have no hope. Deep and dark as may as those who have no hope. It is penetrated by "a holy light and strong" which never fulls to shed its southing luster around the end of those who die in the Lord.

southing luster around the einst it most was due to the follows. The deceased had not only taken the solemn vows of God upon him in the most public manner, inving been a member of the 2d Presbyterion Church of this borough for several years preceding his death, but hose vows and that profession were well approved by a plous, consistent walk and conversation. His career has been brief on earth; but we know he is remembered and mourned for here, and we believe he is numbered among the blessed and glorious family of the Redeemer in Heaven.

Rest, thy once animated and manly form, where it may, friend of my boyhood; thy spirit is safely and inontably lodged in the mansions of thy Heavenly Father.

'Ah, freely has the tear been shed, and freely shall go forth The sigh of grief that Euch us thou, shouldst pass away from earth:

But those that mourn thee, mourn thee not, us those to whom is given
No soothing thought, no blissful hope of parted friends n Heaven; know that thou was't taken to the Christiau's They know that thou was t uneon high reward, high reward.
