The New Orleans papers of the 2d inst bring important intelligence from the seat of war. The Delta et the 2d inst. says:-Capt. Brown, of the schooner Robert Mills, informed by CapasTodd, of the U.S. Army, tain his ground-against-such -overwhelming tain his ground against such overwhending numbers, was slowly falling back in the direction of Monterey; and that Gen. Taylor in-anticipation of an attack on that city, was fortyfying it at every assailable point. It so stated that Gon. Patterson, who was on his march from Camargo to Tampico being made aware of the state of affairs, had countermarched the division under his command, and was rapidly advancing, by force

From Mr. Fowler, a gentleman of this rrom Mr. Fowler, a genueman of mist city, who came passenger in the steam-pro-peller Virginia, and who teft Salillo on the 18th ult. we have subsequently learned, that previous to his leaving, Gen. Worth's spice had come into camp and reported that Santa Anna was within three or loar day's march of Salillo only another structure in the of Saltillo, and rapidly advancing, at the head of about 15,000 men. Gen. Worth immediately sent an expres to Gen. Taylor, which reached him at Victo-tia at 11 o clock. P M. on the 17th, and at 3 o'clock, A. M. the next day, Gen. Taylo despatched two regiments, the Kentucky and Tennessee volunteers, to reinforce Gen. Worth at Saluillo, intending to follow him self, as soon as possible, with all his disposa ble lorce. General Taylor felt quite confident of his being able to arrive at Saltillo before Santa Anna could reach there. The whole force of Gen. Tayler would then amount to 10,000 men, which he considered sufficient to cope with any lorce that Santa Ann could bring against him.
