"Come on my friends! come kneel lown!" This he is accustomed to say previous t giving the pledge. He says this in a bland and almost irresistible tone, which few o his countrymen who hear it pretend to resist. It has a magic about it, which, when coupled with his name and the love borne him by the Irish people, accounts, in a great measure, for his wonderful success. "There is no slavery," says the Rev Father, to a squad on their knees, "like that of strong drink, and you should do all you can to rescue your fellow-man, the drunkard, who is a curse to society, and a curse t himself.

"I have no object, my friends but you happiness; happiness without alloy will be yours in becoming a total abstinence man. "I entered the public schools of this city examination day, and was proud when I re cognized the name of an Irishman's son;there was the best blood of Ireland there.-Oppressed by poverty and obscured by ignorance, all the blessings of this great and glo rious country are within reach, and well may I say unto you who are oppressed by the yoke of intemperance, that the burden o temperance is light. Which of you can flee from the wrath to come? Why will you die Taste not, handle not the cup. Now, is the accented time. I can't be long with you. I look a long voyage to see you, all for you own benefits; to enable you to prosper in the world it to enable you to become great men in the land. I despise the man who keeps his children from school. The world must be onward! onward! Don't expose yourself to temptations. not see clearly the use. 'I can't feel so,' Herbert replied, tossing his head, 'and I don't believe that my father sees any more clearly than I do, the use of all this.

'You are wrong to talk so,' his friend said in a serious tone, 'I would not think as you do for the world. Our fathers know what is best for us, and if we do not confide in them we will surely go wrong.'

'I am not atraid,' responded Herbert, clo sing the book over which he had been poring reluctantly for half an hour, in the vain attempt to fix a lesson on his unwilling mem ory; and taking some marbles from his pecket, commenced amusing himself with them from the teacher's observation.

William said no more, but turned to his lesson with an earnest attention. The difference in the character of the two boys is too plainly indicated in the brief conversation we have recorded to need further illustration To their teacher it was evident, in numerous particulars in their conduct, their habits and manners. William reoligid his lessons correctly while Herbert never learned a task well. One was always punctual at school—the others loiterer by the ways. William's books were well taken care of while Herbert's were soiled, torn, disfigured and bro

Explain, sir Mr. Allen, and that will not be much better explain," begged the priest, probably having visions of comfort, of religion, absolution and vice for which ordinary persons are employ- a well lined purse. 'My errand is a most ed, that of chain carrying to the surveyor of painful one, returned the stranger, 'painful both to me and to yourself, but my mind is made up, and it must be done. Here goes for a confession, thought the priest. 'Know then, sir,' continued the stranger, 'that last night I was, as is my custom, busily engaged in reading the word of God. I was not only reading it, but also interpreted it to myself, and derived much consolation from it. It was near midnight, when I read of the evi spirit how it in former times appeared to men. I could not believe it-I could not conceive how the Almighty ruler, in his wisdom, could create a power to tempt and mislead mankind.' The priest, by this time when had he, as a boy, taken the advice of must have got much interested. "Present his parents and friends, and stored up in his ly,' resumed the stranger, 'I heard a noise memory what they wished him to learn, he in my room, and looking round, I observed might have filled the surveyor's office at I was no longer alone. The evil spirit was with me-he stood immediately behind my chain carrier. Indeed we cannot tell how chair. Unhappy man, said he, in a deep high a position of usefulness he might have voice, to disbelieve the word of God. held, had he improved all opportunities af knelt down, but he commanded me to rise forded him in youth. But he perceived the 'Rise,' continued he,-'no peace, no res shalt thou have; no comfort, no happiness shalt thou know until by thy hands one o so well as their parents, guardians, and teach- those who preach and sin against me had ers, what is best for them. Men who are in suffered death.' With these words the spir active contact with the world, know that the it disappeared, and to save my soul from more extensive their knowledge is on all perdition I have come to obey him-you must die.' The Reverend gentleman mus have been awfully confounded by this die closure. He preserved his presence of mind greater is the return to themselves in wealth and at once proposed to sacrifice another priest instead of him, to which his visite demurred. and 70,000,000 including the Indian Ocean.-From Port to Africa it is 16,000 miles wide. It is generally unfathomable between the tropics, where its depth is so great that a line five miles long has in many places not reached the ibottom. The Atlantic Ocean, apparently estretching from Pole to Pole, is 5000 miles wide, and covers 25,000 square miles.

The German Ocean, now, rapidly Silling up by the detritus from the land, has in a great part of its bed a depth of only 90 feet, sate even near the precipitous coast of Norway the depth is only 5460 feet. At a depth of a mile and a quarter the pressure of the sea is equal to 2809 lbs, on every inch of surface. In the Artic Ocean shells are seen to the depth of 1180 feet, and among the West India Isands at 180 feet, so that the light which fell upon these . shells would ave been visible to an eye at least 960 feet deep in the one case, and 360 feet in the other. The color of all water when pure is a fine bright blue, becoming green when mixed with certain vegetable matters, and brownish yellow when derived from moises.— The saliness of the sea is greatest at the paraltewards the Equator and the Poles, where it is seast, owing to the melting of the ice. At the Straits of Gibraltar the water is four times as east at a depth of 617 fathoms, as it is at the surface. -
