have I advanced in the year toward that humanity which is built nplinto a beautiful form, through good purposes coming forth into good deeds ? Just so far as this true humanity has been attained, and no further, has the waning year been a profitable year. —____

Is your mird not satisfied with the review measured by this standard? Let the fact be wisely improved by a better life in the future. Begin the next year. with this higher standard in your mind, and resolve to live up to it as far as it is in your power.

There is one reflection connected with this theme that should produce a strong impression. It is our present that makes our future. What we purpose and do to-day throws forward its effect upon our coming years. And this is the result of every day's life. What would not some of us give if we could change the rebuking past ? But, alas ! what is done is _ done forever. The present with its deeds flits by and becomes the unchangable past. We may repeat of our wrong, doings, but repentence cannot extract the sting from memory. With this thought which should alone prompt to right ; living in the future, we close our brief sermon; commending its teachings to the wise and simple, the rich and poor, the old and young, the learned and the unlearned, with the hope that it may be like a nail in a sure place, or like apples of gold on pictures of silver.

The Testimony of a Delst.

We always recur with great delight to the estimony of a deist, who alter publicly laoring to disprove Christianity, and to bring Scripture_into_contempt-as-forgery, wasfound instructing his child from the pages of the New Testament. When taxed with the flagrant inconsistency, his only reply was that it was necessary to teach the child morality, and nowhere was there to be found uch morality as in the Bible. We thank the deist for the confession. Whatever our scorn of the man who could be guilty of so foul a dishonesty, seeking to sweep from the earth a volume to which all the while he ecnred for the principles of education, we hank him for his testimony, that the morality of Scripture is a morality not elsewhere be found; so that, if there were no Bible, there would be comparatively no source of instruction in duties and virtues, whose neglect and decline would dislocate the happi" ness of 'human society. If it be certaincertain on the confession of its enemiesples and spurious theories; which would pave the way for a total degeneracy of manners. We should quickly find that honesty and integrily were not held in their former repute, but had given place to fraud and extortion ; that there was an universal setting up of the idel of selfishness, before which all that is generous, and disinterested, and philanthrophic, would be forced to do homage. We should lose from our institutions all that is glorious in liberty, and from our earthly treasure we have gathered in firesides all that gives them attractiveness .---The deist was right. We may deny and stempt to disprove the divine origin of Scripture, and nevertheless, we must keep the voume as a text-book of morality, if, indeed, we do not wish the banishment of all that is lovely and eacred from our homes, and the breaking up, through the lawlessness of ungoverned passions, of the quiet and the beauwhich are yet round our families .- Rev. Henry Melville.
