The effects the chair, and paid the wager. f the poison were terrible beyond description;was in operation at the College, and before I vent there, but most soverely afterward. I viote but one of the anonymous letters prouced at the trial-the one mailed at East Camridge. The little bundle referred to in the atter detained by the jailor, contained only a ottle of nitrie acid for domestic use. I had en it stated in a newspaper that I had purchased a quantity of oxalic acid, which it was that it may shown if there be occasion, what creally was that I had purchased. I have drawn up in separate papers an ex-anation of the use I intended to make of the ood sent for on Thursday, the 22d, and of the conversation with Littlefield about the dissectng vault. I think that Pettee, in his tes. inc mistook my words about having settled ith Dr. P. Whatever I did say of the kind as in the hope that I should be able to pacify reply, we are bonly beginners, and can only Dr. P. and make some arrangement with him, afford to keep one goose between us." and was said in order to quiet Pettee, who wa red basket, and scattered all his carefully col acted flowers far away over the field. His paience could endure no longer, for his face row distorted with rage, and he flung the mpty basket from him, with a burst of anger. Crying bitterly, and thoroughly wethe reached it last his parents' house in a pitiful plight.

But soon another change appeared; the storm bassed away, and the sky grow clear again .---The birds began their songs anew, and the countryman his labor. The air had become coler and purer, and a bright calm seemed to lie lovingly in every valley and on every hill. What a delicious odor rose from the freshened ields ! and their cultivators looked with grateful joy at the departing clouds which had poured fertalizing rain upon them. The sight of the blue sky soon tempted the frightened boy out again, and being by this time ashamed of his ill-temper, he went very quietly to look for his discarded basket, and to try and fill it again. He seemed to feel a new life within him .---The cool breath of the air-the small of the fields-the leafy frees-the warbling birds, all appeared doubly beautiful after the storm, and ne humiliating consciousness of his foolish and unjust ill-temper softened and chastened his joy. After a long search he espied the basket lying on the slope of a hill, for a bramle-bush had caught it, and sheltered it from the violence of the wind. The child felt quite thankful to the ugly-looking bush, as he disenlangled the baskets

But how great was his delight, on looking round him, to see the fields spangled with lowers, as numerous as the stars of heaven ! for the rain had nourished into blossom thouands of daisies, opened thousands of buds, and scattered pearly drops on every leaf. Erick litted about like a busy bee, and gathered away to his heart's content. The sun was now war his setting, and the happy child hastened ome with his basket full once more. How delighted he was with his flowery treasure, and with the pearly garland of fresh strawberry flowers! But his eyes sparkled much mora joyously when he received the kisses and thanks . of his gentle sister. "Is it not true, dear," said his mother, "that the pleasures we prepare for others are the best of all ?" 5,
