Sauday Beadings From the Presbyterian.-The Death of Great Men. In the midst of national mourning over the death of the Chief Magistrate of our country, the intelligence reaches us that Sir Robert Peel is dead-suddenly killed by a fall from his horse. The event has struck the United Kingdom with astonishment, and been felt in its suddenness and effects in the heart of the continent. He was not in power at the moment of his death, but hewas accustomed to wield it, and a few months, weeks perhaps, might have restored him to the helm-of-affairs. But he is dead !~ General Taylor is dead. Louis Phillippe is said to be dying. All men are dying. The great must die. There is no discharge in that war. In the sudden fall of those who have filled the highest places in the earth, whose name has become world-famious, and whose position seemed to promise them exemption from the common lot of men, we are compelled to see what we should never lose sight of, that one event cometh alike to all.

"Death, with impartial fate, Knocks at the palace door and cottage gate." Some men are mighty, but God'i mightier than they. His hand is quite as essential to their support, as it is to keep an infant in life. When he withdraws it, they fall and die.

And how true those oft repeated words of a great British statesman do now appear-"What shadows we are, what shadows we pursue?" Where is General Taylor? Where is Robert Peel? Vanished as the shadow on the wall. We saw them yesterday; to-day they are gone. As shadows they, so were they shadows which they grasped What to them this moment is the Pres idency of the widest republic of the earth, or the Premiership of the mightiest kingdom in the world. To a Sovereign in finitely above them both, they have ren dered their account, and taken their pla ces where beggars and princes are on a level, all earthly distinctions are merged and crowns and thrones and Aorders are distributed on principles here and heretofore unknown. ofore unknown. Impressed by the death of such men struck down in the height of their fame and power, how vain appears the struggle for distinction among men ! It is so short lived. It costs a life to win it, and then there is no life left in which to enjoy it. Even those who have power the longest are far from being the happiest. It is said that the Emperor of all the Russias is about to abdicate. Many a crown press es an aching head, and the royal purple often covers an anxious heart. It is not greatness that makes happiness; and and greatness, when gained, gives no exemption from death.

Yet the struggle will go on. There are thousands who would strive for the Presidency, though they were to die, like Taylor or Harrison, in the first half of their term. Fame, power, embty and unsatisfying as it is, is the great good with men.

Let the death of great men remind us of the glories of the eternal state in contrast with those that perish with the u-

Selfishness Unchristian,

Live for some purpose in the world. Act your part well. Fill up the meas--ure of your duty to others. Conduct yourself so that you shall be missed with sorrow when you are gone. Multitudes of our species are living in such a man-ner, that they are not likely to be remembered a moment after their disappearance They leave behind them scarcely any traces of their existence, but are forgotten almost as although they had never been. They are, while they live like one pebble lying unobserved amongst millions on the shore ; and when they die, they are like that same pebble thrown into the sea, which just ruffles the surface, sinks and is forgotten, without being missed from-the beach .--- They are neither regretted by the rich, wanted by the poor, nor celebrated by the learned! Who has been the better for their life ? Who has been the worse for their death ? Whose tears have they dried up ? Whose wants supplied ? Whose miseries have they healed ? Who would unbar the gate of life to re-admit them to existence? Or what face would greet them back again to our world with a smile ?--- Wretched, unproductive mode of existence! Selfish ness is its one curse-it is a starving vice.' The man that does no good, gets none. He is like the heath in the desert, neither yielding fruit, nor seeing when good cometh; a stunted, dwarfish, miserable shrub. We are sent into the world to do good; and to be destitute of public spirit is to forget one half our errand upon earth .--Rev. J. A. James.

EXAMPLE OF THE EARLY CHRISTI ANS.-Justin Martyr, one of the earliest "writers, in 'his "Apology" to the heathen in behalf of the Christians says : "We who once hated and murdered one another, we who would not enjoy the hearth in common with strangers, on account of the difference of our customs, now live in common with them, since the appearance of Christ ; we pray for our enemies; we seek to persuade those who hate us unjustly, that they may direct their lives according to the glorious doctrines of Christ, and may share with us the joyful hope of enjoying the same privileges from God the Lord of all things." · · · · ·
