OCTOBER.

By WH. C. DRYART.

Ah, thou art yelcoine, Heaven's delicious breath, When woods begin to wear the crimson leaf, And suns grow meek, and the meek suns grow brief, And the year smiles as it draws near its death. Wind of the sunny south? oh still deby. In the gay woods and in the golden air, Like to a good old age released from care, Journeying, in long serebily, away, in each a hright, late fulct, would that!

Might wear out life like thee, 'mid bowers & brooks, And, dearer, yet, the 'sunshine-of kind looks,' And unuste of kind voices over night;
And when my last sand it winkled in the glass,' Pass sitently from mee, as then does not care.

A short paragraph will often afford you a profitable source of reflection for a whole day. For this purpose keep some valuable book or paper always within your reach, so that you may lay your hand on it at any moment when you are about the house. We know a large family that has made itself intimately acquainted with history, prothe Directors filled the vacancy by elec-United States, by the practice of having one of the children, each one taking a week by turns, read every morning while the rest were at breakfast.

WORTH KNOWING. -It is said that a small piece of rosin dipped in the water, which is placed in a vessel on the stove, will add a peculiar property to the atmosphere of the room, which will give great relief to persons troubled with cough. The heat of the water is sufficient to throw off the aroma of the rosin, and give the same relief as is afforded by a combustion of the rosin. It is preferable to the combustion, because the rosin may be used for weeks.
