The Russian Empire.

Its HISTORY TO THE TIME OF PETER THE GREAT.

Russia is the most extraordinary country on the globe, in the four most important particulars of empire—its his tory, its extent, its population, and its

It has for Europe another interest-the interest of alarm, the evidence of an ambition which has existed for a hundred and fifty years, and has never paused; an increase of territory which has never suffered the slightest casualty of fortune; the most complete security, against the retaliation of European war; and a government at once despotic and popular; exhibiting the most boundless authority in the sovereign, and the most absolute submission in the people, a mixture of habitual obedience, and divine homage; the reverence to a monarch, with almos the prostration to a divinity.

Its history has another superb anomaly: Russia gives the most memorable instances in human annals, of the power which lie within the mind of individual man. Peter the Great was not the restorer, or the reformer of Russia; he was its moral creator. He found it, not as Agustus found Rome, according to the old adage, "brick, and left it marble;' he found it a living swamp, and left it covered with the fertility of laws, energy, and knowledge; he found it Asiatic and lest it European; he removed it as far from Scythia as if he had placed the diameter of the globe between: he found it no brick, but mire, and he transformed a region of huts into the magnificence of Rüssia first appeared in Europear history in the middle of the ninth century. Its climate and its soil had till then retained it in primitive barbarism. The sullenness of its winter had prevented invasion by civilized nations, and the nature of its soil, one immense plain, had given full scope to the roving habits of its half-famished tribes. The great invasions which broke down the Roman empire, had drained away the population from the north, and left nothing but rem nants of clans behind. Russia has no sea, by which she might send her bold savages to plunder or to trade with Southern and Western Europe. And, while the man of Scandanavia was subduing kingdoms, or carrying back his spoils to his nothern crags and lakes, the Russian remained, like the bears of his forest, in his cavern during the long winter of his country; and even when the summer came, was still but a melancholy savage, living like the bear upon the roots and fruits of his ungenial soil-

It was one of those Normans, who instead of steering his bark towards the opulence of the south, turned his dreary dventure to the north, that Russia ower her first connection with intelligen-mankind. The people of Nevgorod, people of traders, finding themselves overpowered by their barbarish neigh-bors, solicited the aid of Ruric, a Baltic chiestian, and of course, a pirate and a robber. The name of Norman had carned old renown in the north. Ruric came, rescued the city, but paid himself by the seizure of the surrounding territory, and found a kingdom, which he transmitted to his descendents, and which lasted until the middle of the six teenth century.

In the subsection prignage, and drapedition, in the style of the Baltic exploits, was sent to plunder Constanting the The expedition consisted of two thousand cances, with eighty thousand men on board. The expedition was defeated, for the Greeks had not yet sunk into the degeneracy of later times They fought stoutly for their capital, and roasted the pirates in their own canoes,

Those invasions, however, were tempting to the idleness and poverty, or to the avarice and ambition of the Russians; and Constantinople continued to be the great object of cupidity and assault, for three hundred years. -But the city of Constantinople was destined to fall to a mightier conqueror.

Still, the nothern barbarian had now learned the road to Greece, and intercourse was mutually Greece, found daring allies in her old plunderers, and in the eleventh century she gave the Grand duke Vuldmir a wife, in person of Anna, sister of the emperor Basil II., a gift made more important by its being accompanied by his conversion to Christianity.

A settled succession is the great se cret of royal peace: but among these bold riders of the desert, nothing was ever settled save by the sword; and the first act of all these sons, on the decease of their father, was, to slaughter each other; until the contest was settled in their grave, and the last survivor quietly ascended the throne.

But war, on a mightier scale than the Russian Steppes had ever witnessed, was now rolling over Central Asia. The cavalry of Genghiz Khan, which came not in squadrons, but in nations, and charged, not like troops, but like thunder clouds, began to pour down upon the valley of the Wolga. Yet the con-quest of Russia was not to be added to e triumphs of the great Tartar chieftian: a mightier conquest stopped him on his way, and the Tartar died.

His son Tohusi, in the beginning of the thirteenth century, burst over the frontier at the head of half a million of horsemen. The Russian princes, hastily making up their quarrels, advanced to meet the invader; but their army was instantly trampled down, and before the middle of the century, and the provinces, and all the cities of Russia, were the prey of the men of the wilderness. Novgorod alone escaped. The history of this great city would be highly interesting, if it were possible now to recover its details. It was the chief depot of the northern Asiatic com merce with Europe; it has a government laws, and privileges of its own, with which it suffered not even the Khan of the Tartars to interfere. Its population amounted to four hundred thousandthen nearly equal to the population of a kingdom. In the thirteenth century i connected itself still more effectively with European commerce, by becoming a member of the Hanseatic League; and the wonder and pride of the Russians were expressed in the well-known half profane proberb, "Who can resist God and the great Novgorod?" There is always something almost approaching to picture que grandeur in the triumph of barbarism. The Turk, until he was fool enough to throw away the turban, was the most showy personage in the world. The Arabs, under Mahomit, were the most stately warri-, ors, and the Spanish Moors threw all the pomp, and even the romance of Europe into the shade. Even the chiefs the "Golden Hords" seemed to have had as picturesque a conception of su-premacy as the Saracen. Their only city was a vast camp, in the planes between the Caspian and the Wolga; and while they left the provinces in the hands of the native princes, and enjoyed themselves in the manlier sports of hunting through the plains and mountains, they commanded that every vassal prince should attend at the imperial tent to receive permission to reign or perhaps to live; and that even, when they sent their Tartar collectors to receive the tribute, that Russia princes should lead the Tartar's horse by the bridal, and give him a feed of oats out of their cap of state! But another of those sweeping devastators, one of those gigantic executioners, who seem to have been sent, from time to time to punish the horrible profigacies of Asia, now rose upon the north, Timour Khan, the Tamarlane of European story, the invincible, the lord of the Tartar world, rushed with his countless troops upon the sovereignties of western Asia. This universal conquerer crushed the Tartar dynasty of Russia, and then burst away tike an inundation, to overwhelm other lands. But the native Rus sians again made head against their Tartar masters, and a century and a half of sanguinary warfare followed, with various fortunes and without any other result than blood.

In the fifteenth century Russia began to assume a form. Ivan III broke off the vassalage of Russia to the "Golden Horde." He had married Sophia, the niece of the Greek Emperor, to which we may attribute his civilization; and he received the embassis of Germany, Venice, and Rome, at Moscow. His son, Ivan IV, took Novgored, which he ruined, and he continued to fight the Poles and Tartars until he died. His son. Ivan. in the middle of the sixteenth century, was crowned by the title of Czar, formed rhe first standing army of Russia, named the Strelitzes and establised a code of laws. In 1598; by the death of the Czar Feeder without children, the male line of Ruric, which had held the throne for sever hundred and thirty-six soverigns became

Another dynasty of remarkable distinction ascended the throne, in the beginning of the seventeenth contury. Michael Romanoff, decended from the line of Ruric, by the female side, was declared Czar. His son Alexis was the father of Peter the Great, who, with his brother Ivan, was placed on the throne at the decease of their father, but both the guardianship of the Princess was sent to a convent. Ivan, imbecile in mind and body, surrendered the throne, and Leter became sole soverign of Russia... The accession of Petar began the last and greatest period of Russian history. Though a man of fierce passions and barbarian habits, he had formed a high conception of the value of European arts, chiefly through an inelligent Genevere, Lefort, who had been his tutor Blackwood's Magazine. .

PUT UP AND SOLD BY SAM'L M. KIER, CANAL BLOOM BY SAM'L M. KIER, CANAL The healthful balm from Nature's secret sp/ing, The bloom of health, and life, to man will bring, As from her depths the magte liquid flows, To calm our sufferings, and assuage our woes.

The bloom of health, and life, to man will wring, As from her depths the magic liquid flows, To calm our sufferings, and assuage our woes.

PETROLEUM.

Tables great remedy of Nature, afepcated and fair trials has worked its wate popular favor. We need hardly repeat the fact, that this is a pure, unadulterated NATURAL MEDICINE, and is put up as it flows from the bosom of the earth, without admixture. In these days of Nostrum vending, we do not wonder at the incredulity vinced by the community, upon the introduction of a New Remeay, but that incredulity shall not suppress a medicine, whose powerful influence has mitigated and cured so many diseases incident to our race; were weet withhold remedy like this from public notice, we should onsider ourselves as Aguilty of keeping back something that was intended to relieve—much-human suffering, and dispel the gloom and pain of many a one, whose system has for years been racked and tortured by the fell engines of Disease. Nay, do not wonder, gentle reader, and join with others in the cry, that it curea too many diseases for, if you will take the trouble to run over the list of diseases for which it is recommended, you will find-that they are diseases affecting the same kind of tissues, and consequently IT IS APPLICABLE TO ALL.

But the best evidence in favor of a medicine are the cares themselves. When these stand out in bold relief, and when he who for years has suffered the tortures and pangs of an immedicable lesion, which has been hastening him to the narrow house, speaks out in its praise, what better evidence need be wanted? We have the evidence in our passession, of many astonishing cures, which will be furnished to any one who really doubte the efficacy of this wonderful remedy. The Earth, from which man was created, bears in her bosom remedies which if known, are capable of restoring him to health and vigor, when prostrated by sickness and disease, It was the opinion of the celebrated Dr. Rush, that there existed in Nature an antidote to every malady to which m he sea of life.

The Petroleum is one of this kind of remedies, and is endued with powers to relieve more human suffering than any other medicine extant.—
