TIME.

Looking back along the dark and lengthtened vistas of the past, we may learn the power of Time. Observe his mighty-ruins. What spectral forms a-What wrecks, the ghosts of rurise 1 ined nations !

Cities, Kingdoms, Empires have sunk in dread decay, wrought by his ruth-less hand, who standeth yet upon his adamantine pedeștal, pointing ever on to coming destinice. Lo ! in his noiseless car, sad desolation's lord goes on destroyingly .- Man's works sublime crumble before him. Nations ruined, bow heneath his tread. His hand, though tremulous, shall lay all nations low. Nature quakes under his iron rod. The rocks full headlong. Rivers dried, die away into offensive pools, which breathe a noisome pestilence through all the air. Time's destructive sythe cuts down both great and small. Princes perish with the people.

"Go ask the ruins of old Rome to tell, Where Cresar sleeps, and where her heroes fell." Even the Sciplos tomb contains no precious ashes now. The very sepulchres lie tenantless of their heroic dwel lers.—Balbec, Palmyra, where are they? The thirsty rivers bubble₅like brooklets, through their marble wilderness.

Babylon's vast extent, stupendous walls, brazen gates, magnificent edifices nre celebrated in the annals of curious historians. Like Troy, she once was, but now is no more. Her spires are sunk-her lofty towers and battlements are gone to utter decay. The acme of her glory she was just rising, when was uttered the memorable prophecy respecting her. And she has indeed been en tirely wasted. Scarcely can any relics now be tound of her. "It shall never be inhabited, neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation; neither shall the Arabians pitch tent there; hei ther shall the shepherds make their fold there."

And Rome, that mother of dead empires, stands in her voiceless wo, the sad Niobe of nations. When the traveler imagines he has found her seated on her. seven hills, he afterwards finds it to be a "Mirage of ruin, that has risen near him.' One mass of desolation, however, here, seems to have baffled time to moulder. Half cities have been reared, from it, yet doth it present a great colossal skeleton, causing the beholders to exclaim---

"While stands the Coligeum. Rome shall stand, "When fulls the Collsenni, Rome shall fall, And when Rome falls, then falls the world?" What does not fade before the might of Time? The flinty pyramids, and walls it he shall devour at last.

"Remorseless time ! Fierce spirit of the Glass and Sythet what power Can stay him in his silent course, or milt -illi iron heart with pity."

Time, as applied to sublenery' things, signifies the duration of their existence .-- Every living thing shall live' its time .- Man's time, how short ? To day he is; to morrow, seek him, and lo! the cold clods of the valley cover him. Our globe, too, shall have its time. Time. then, began with those things measured by it ?- What, therefore, is it ? A bubble on the vast ocean of unsuccessive duration or eternity. It breaks, and behold ! it is lost amidst the constant current of endless ages. It hurries noisc-lessly by, and is gone, gone irretrieva-bly, being lost in the never-ending round of ages.

"O time thy years have nearly circled round ? The tottering pillars of they through a control declare it; And, ere long, a Mightler shall proclaim, Time was, but Time shall be no more."

Time is precious to man. It is his time of living here; of living well or ill. His time is, às it were, his life. It -is-given him in trust. Like a trustee, he will be called to an account. The hours permitted to slide away without improvement, are lost. In losing them, we break the law of the Great Creator, who will call upon us to render an account of our stewardship.—Time lost—a treasure is lost. To the good, time cannot be lost. " 'The end of his time, is the ending, also, of this painful, toilsome journeyis his happy exit to a world, whofe the perishing things of time shall be no more known. To the wicked it is lost, lost irrevocably. The sand of the timemeasure of every man's life is fast run-ning out. 'Time's fleeting moments make us old. Still, on it creeps, each little moment at another's heels, till hours, days, years are gone. And when pas-sed by, what then of time is seen ?---Naught, save his broad-spread pinions swifter than the winds.

Improve it, therefore, ere the voice proclaim - "Thou fool! this night shall thy soul be required of thee." The allwise Creator has concealed from man the hour of his departure from time to eternity. So, also, has he hidden from him the exact moment of this world's dissolution.

"On, on, our moments hurry by, Like shadows of a passing cloud a fill general darkness wyaps the sky, And man sleeps senseless in his shroud."

The Man of Truth.

But it requires integrity and high moral courage to withstand the templation of worldly policy and selfishness: "To be honest as the world goes, is to be one picked out of ten thousand." Our will must be conformed to the high principles of immutable justice, or personal integrity cannot be maintained. "He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely; but he that pervertetly his ways shall be known." All persons must encounter difficulties ; to overcome them is the prerogative of the pure and the just .--- They who enter the furnace in faithfulness to themselves and the highest virtues, shall not miss the form of the fourth in the flames, but shall soon come forth unharmed, as the Babylonish captives were delivered through the flames, from the infinitely greater calamity of apostacy. For turning aside from the true and safe path, Jacob was chastened to the end of his days, Peter was openly rebuked, Judas and Ananias are left on record, beacons as frightflu in their doom as they should be powerful to warn.
