- BY MARY HOWITT. C The moon beams on the billowy deep,
 The blue waves rippling on the strand,
 The drean in its peaceful sleep,
 The shell that murmurs on the sand,
 The cloud that dims the bending sky,
 The bow that on its bosom glows,
 The Sun that lights the vault on high,
 The stars at midnight's calm repose,
 These praise the powers that wriched the sky,
 And robed the earth in beauty's dio.
- The melody of Nature's choir,
 The deep toned anthems of the sea,
 The wind that tunes a viewless lyre,
 The zephyr on its pinton free,
 The thunder with its thrilling notes,
 The peal upon the mountain air,
 The peal upon the wountain air,
 The lay that through the foligage floats;
 Or sinks in laying cadence there:
 These all to Thee their voices raise,
 A fervent voice of gushing praise.
- The day-star, herald of the dawn, As the dark shadows filt away,
 The tint upon the check of morn,
 The dew-drop gleaming on the spray—
 From wild birds in their wanderings,
- From site and the result of the sea.

 From all earth's fair and to the sea.

 From all earth's fair and to the sea.

 Doth living praise ascend to Thee:

 These with there silent tongue proclaim.

 The varied wonders of thy name.
- Father, thy hand hath formed the flower, And flung it on the verdan les,
 -Thou had at it open at summer's shower,
 Its hace of beauty speak of Thee;
 Thy works all praise Thee; shall not man
 Alike attone the grateful bymn?
 Shall he not join the lotty strain,
 Eshoed from heart of Seraphim?
 We tune; to Thee our humble lays,
 Thy mercy, goodness, love, we praise.

Cateway to Elternity.

There is a solemn mystery which hangs like an impenetrable cloud around the dread entrance to eternity. We travel with our friends, neighbors, and fellow-men, up to this mysterious spot, and there the immortal spirit, dislodged from its frail tenement of clay; is ushered in a moment thro' this iron gate-way-but we cannot follow them. Our intensest vision cannot penetrate one inch beyond this adamantine wall, which conceals the spirit-land and its wonderful mysteries from our view. But our time will come to pass this iron gate-way. We shall enter it alone. Each man for himself, in his own dread experience, must pass the solemn boundary. He knows not-he cannot know the hour until it arrives. And yet how unconcerned-how negligent—how careless of all preparation for this dread hour are the multitudes which crowd and flutter for a day on life's brief stage. Angels have no death to under-There is no such affair of unnatural violence between them and their final destiny. It is for man, and for aught that annears, it is for man alone, to fetch from the other side of a material panorama that hems and encloses him the great and abiding realities with which he he has everlastingly to do. It is for him locked in an imprisoned clay, and with no loop holes of communication between himself and all that is around him, to light up in his bosom a lively and realizing state of things, which eye hath-never seen and ear hath never heard.— It is for man and man alone, to travel in thought, over the ruins of a mighty desolation; and beyond the wreck of that present world, by which he is encompassed, to conceive that future world in which he is to expatriate forever .- Bee-

Pit is reckoned that each individual averages three hours conversation daily, at a rate of a hundred words a minute, or twenty pages of an octavo volume in an hour. At this rate, we talk a volume of four hundred octavo pages in a week, and 52 volumes a year.-Ex-

These "fifty two" volumes of our conversation have not been lost. They are daid up on the shelves of the great "Librarv above, a record ofall that we have said during our life-time. Against a man that has reached the age of sixty, there are thus preserved more than three thousand such volumes; all of which will be opened and read at the great day of account. "By our words shall we be justified or condemned." There is, in every man's daily conversation, a sufficient proof of the character within, without any reference to his deeds. How much, in our lives, whether we are young or old, have we spoken that was wrong! How many falsehoods, departures from truth, intentions to deceive, are contained in those volumes of record! Hew much that is foolish, and light, and vain! How little that has profited the world, added to its information, increased its happiness, soothed its misery! How little that has reflected any honor to ourselves, or mirrored the purity, honesty, truth and uprightness that should reign within! Who would wish, as each Saturday night arrives, to unclasp the huge vol ume of his words during the week, and re-peruse its contents? With what a blush of shame, or sigh of wounded integrity would he close his book in agony, at contaminated thoughts, and wasted urs; at all the vanity, folly and frivolousness manifested in its record ?-Hartford Courant.

A Great River from a Small Rill.

A Welsh clergyman asked a little girl for the text of his last sermon. The child gave no answer-she only wept .-He ascertained that she had no bible to look for the text. And that led him to inquire whether her parents and neighbors had a Bible; and this led to that meeting in London in 1804, of a few devoted Christians, to devise means to supply the poor in Wales with the Bible. the grand issue of which was the formation of the British and Foreign Bible Society-a society which has already distributed more than 15,000,000 copies of the Bible, its issues now reaching nearly a million and a half annually.— And this, in turn, led to the formation of the American Bible Society, and to the whole beautiful cluster of sister institutions throughout the world, which are so many trees of life, scattering the golden fruits of immortality among all the nations of the earth. This mighty river, so deep, so broad, so far reaching in its many branches, we may trace back to that little girl. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

A Sublime Truth.

Let a man have all the world can give him, he is still miserable, if he has a grovelling, unlettered, undevout mind.— Let him have his gardens, his fields, his woods, his lawns, for grandeur, plenty, ornament, and gratification; while at the same time God is not in all his thoughts. And let another have neither field garden; let him only look at nature with en enlightened mind—a mind which can see and adore the Creator in his works can consider them demonstrations of his power, his wisdom his goodness, and his truth—this man is greater, as well as happier, in his poverty, than the other in his riches. The one is little higher than a beast, the other but little lower than an angel.—Jones of Nayland.

BURRELL'S CORN SHELLER.

BURRELL'S CORN SHELLER.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the farming community that he has purchased the right to Burrell's celebrated Corn Sheller, for the counties of Cumberland and Franklin.—Farmers who have used this Corn Sheller, pronounce it a most invaluable invention. It is simple in its construction and not liable to get out of order. It separates the corn from the cob without breaking either and delivers the corn clean and fit for market. It shells from ten to twenty bushels per hour. Eight hundred of them have been told the past season by the inventor, all of which were nighly approved.

Persons wishing to see the above Corn Sheller, can do so by calling at the shop of the subscriber, corner of North Hanover and Louther streets. Carlisle, where he will keep constantly on hand a large number for sale. Every farmer and miller should have the above cheap but Valuable Corn Sheller.

Systim:

The constant, unsolicited application for
Life Insurance, gives the most abundant and gratifying proof that the public mind is deeply impressed with the tast importance of this subject. The great object, however, of Insuranceshould be tagety, otherwise the whole motive to insure may be disappointed. Too much care cannot be practised in the selection of an office with which to effect the contract—The choice should be regulated not by present and constant large inducements, as this is certainly incompatible with finure benefits. The premiums on life are calculated for the future, it present and prospective benefits therefore are given; the result ultimately, must terminate in litigation, disappointment and ruin. The object aimed at by this institution is stability and perpetuity. The rates of premium have been carefully prepared with reference to fluctuations.—The cash system of payments has also been adopted. Unpaid premium rotes constitute no part of the assets of this company, and every contingency being fortified with an ample capital, security stamps the whole system. This feature, paramount to all other considerations, commonds the company to public favor. Explanatory pamphlets, blanks, application papers information, and every facility will be cheerfully furnished the public by Mr. E.
