 Infink my chain, and let my breath
 Flow out, flow out in prayer,
 Thus may I, from my last, long sleep,
 Start into being neav,
 And onward to eternity
 My glorious path pursue L

THE BIBLE.

In a charge to the Grand Jury of Essex county, in 1843, Chief Justice Hornblower, of New York, made use of the following beautiful and impressive language, which does honor to his head and heart : 4

"We have in the Bible a wiser and holier rule of action than the wisdom of man ever conceived, and in fewer words than all the learning of the schools ever compressed the wisest of their maxims; "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do you even so to them."-This is emphatically the golden rule .-It is universal in its application, and eternal in its principles. It lies at the foundation of our jurisprudence, legal and equitable, civil and criminal and if acted on this would do more to purify society, and elevate man to his true dig nity as a rational and immortal being, than all the learning of the schools and the vain philosophy of the world.

"It is a short and simple desson that all may learn, from the listing child of civilization to the gray headed and untured squares of the wilderness a lesson. tored savage of the wilderness-a lesson which, if all would inculcate and practice, would smooth down the aspertlies of life, mitigate the sorrows incident to humanity, sweeten the springs of domestic enjoyment, strengthen and beautify the bonds of the social compact, dispense with the officers of justice, demolish our prisons, and pull down the last scaffold that should ever be erected for the execution of the convict.

But instead of this, we are constantly told of the dignity and perfectibility of human nature, the noble qualities of the mind, and the elevating influence of education in the illimitable fields of art and science upon the happiness of man; and each lecturer, in his turn, has just discovered some new principle in nature, which is to recufy all the ills of life.

"When the giants in human intellect can tell me whence Moses derived his science of legislation without admitting the supernatural and divine authority of the ten commandments, I shall begin to listen with more reverence to the teachers of human perfectibility. In that short and comprehensive code, we find a rule of action covering the whole of man's existence; a rule not only prescribing our external behavior, but reaching to the secret thoughts and feelings of our hearts, in every possible condition of life and in all our relations to our Maker and our fellow beings. The wisdom of ages, the learning and philosophy of the schools, have never discovered a single defect in that code. Not a virtue which is not there inculcated. Not a vice in its most doubtful and shadowy which is not here prohibited. Whence then I ask, did the great Jewish law-giver derive his spirit of legislation? If that code was written by the finger of Almighty let us bow with holy rever-ence, and seek no better rule of life, nor any wiser principles of action. But if they emanated only from the capacious mind, and were dictated by the wisdon of Moses-this Moses was a wiser and more learned man than any of our new teachers; and I had rather be under his jurisdiction, and keep his commandments than learn new rules of civil polity and social intercourse from the most learned and wise of the present day."

Trust in God.

I could write down twenty cases | The assortment includes a few plain when I wished God had done otherwise than he did; but which I now see, had I my own will, would have led to extensive mischief. We must lay hold on God; we must follow hard after him; he must determine not to let him go. And yet we must learn to let God, alone .-Quietness before God is one of the most difficult of all Christian graces-to sit where he places us; to be what he would have us be, and this as long as he pleases -- Anon.
