Them an, approving what had charmed the boy, Would lie at last in comfort, peace and boy, And not with curses on his heart who stole The gem of truth from his ungarded soul."

We may apply this to our early, native, Net England revorence for the Subbath, that reve rence by which God's blessing has come down to us as an heir loom to the picty of our pilgrim fathers. If there is any curse descrved, any anathema more terrible than another, let it fall upon those who labor to destroy that native, heaven-born reverence, and to trample the Sabbath under the swinish hoof of infidelity and intemperance. If he who steals the truth from one soul is to be accursed, what indeed shall be said of those who steal it from a nation?

What shall be said of those who break down and put to scorn that sacred hedge around the religious observance of the Sabbath, that strong and religious public scutiment againsi its profanation, which a few years ago no A-merican, who could hope for a respectable po-sition in society, would have dared to violate, stion in society, would have dared to violate, for he knew its power, and was well ware that the man who attempted to break it down would be scorned and rejected by it. But men come in ignorance of this sacred public sentiment, strangers to it, and entirely out of its cifele, and deterred by no fear, trample down the Sabbath with impunity. And such an exam-nle being once set the prescriptive gracedness ple being once set, the prescriptive sacredness of this adminable public feeling is broken, the angel is gone that helped to guard this gate of angel is gone that helped to guard this gate of paradise from intrusion, and sots rush in where angels and true patriots would not have dared to tread. Let is a sight to fill the dassim of a true deres of his country with intense anguish. We are glad enough to have our country a re-fluge for the oppressed; we welcome them, of whatever name, language or nation; but every Sabbath breaker is a curse to the country, and we would rather have every foreigner that starts from Europe, to set up the traffic in li-quor as the means of his subsistence in this country, sunk to the bottom of the accomquot is the inclusion of the bottom of the occan, author than come to recompense the enjoyment of our privileges, with the destruction of our morals and religion; rather than come to acmorals and religion; rather than come to ac--complish the desceration of our Sabbath, which is the only safe-guard of our prosperity and freedom, the only insurance of the favor of our Gqd. We firmly wish that instead of the easy importation of such examples, there were dbirty thousand miles of ocean betw cen us and Europe, rather than three; yea, we would rather have an impassable gulf, thun our dear-est institutions trampled on Dr. Cheever.
