THE BIBLE.

The Bible is the only book which God has ever sent, the only one he ever will send into this world. All other books are frail and transight as time, since they are all the registers of Time; but the Bible is durable as eternity, for its pages are the record of Eternity. All other works are weak and imperfect, like their author, man; but the Bible is replete with infinite power and perfection, like its author, God. Every, other volume is limited in its usefulness and influence; but the Bible comes forth conquering and to conquer.

The Bible only, of all the myriads of books the world has seen, is equally interesting and important to all mankind. Its tidings whether . Important to all mankind. It's tidings whether of peace or of woe, are the same to the poor, the ignorant, and the weak, as to the rich, the wise and the powerful... Among the most re-markable of its attributes is justice; for it looks with impartial eyes on kings and on slaves, on the chief and the goldier; on phil-osophers and peasants; on the eloquent and the dumb. From all, it exacts the same obe-dience to its commandments promising to the dience to its commandments, promising to the good the reward of their loyalty, but denoun-cing to the axil the awful consequences of their vaballion rebellion. Nor are the purity and holiness, the wisdom and benevolence of the Soriptures less con-spicuous. In vain may we look elsewhere for the models of the husband and the wife, the parent and the oblid, the particitand the schol-ar, the philantropistand the christian, the pri-vate citizen and the ruler of the nation. What-over shall be their respective lets whether over shall be their respective lots, whether poverty or wealth, prosperity or adversity, so-cial influence or solitary station, the Bible is their only fountain of truth-their only source of virtue and greatness, of honor and folicity. Here, then, lot us repose our trust—here let us look for our beacon of safety—and wheth-er sunshine or gloom, the storm or the calm, the beauty and wealth of spring, or the na-kedness and desolation of winter, may be our portion—supported and guided by the Bible, all nust be well with us in Time, for all shall the well with us in tormity—Guide. be well with us in ctornity.-Grinke

Conversion of the Aged.

In a sermon to young men, Dr. Bedell said, "I have now been nearly twenty years in the ministry of the gospel, and I here publicly state to you that I do not believe I could enumerate three persons over fifty years of age, mally momenteous question, 'What shall I do to be saved ?? " Another distinguished, and still living divine of our country, has said, "I will not say that none are converted in old age, but they are few and far between, like the scattered grapes on the uttermost branches af-.tor the vintage is gathered! Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

fact, that everything in nature turns instinct tively to something higher than itself. The simple herb expands itself as if seeking the law of its growth in the shrub that bends over it, like a guardian angel. The shrub finds its type in the tree; and the tree itself, because there is nothing higher, looks up to heaven .--The tide swells to the moon; the waper expands in the sunbeam. So all animals that are brought into connection with him, look up to man. Is the great law to be arrested here? Is all beyond this a blank void? Is there no higher than himself, which may preserve for man the upward tendency. of all things-nothing which can stimulate and sustain, and be the ultimate of his aspirations?

Nature and reason alike reject the idea. If there were no great sustaining power to preserve the balance-if the connecting chain were ruptured here, man would be thrust by the projectile forces below into utter and uni--versal-annihilation, even to his physical being, because he could not, from his own strength alone, resist the upward impulse. The phi-losophy of steam will illustrate this; for the expansive force acts powerfully from below, and if there is no outlet above, the accumulation of power must terminate in explosion. In nature nothing is abrupt therefore the chain of being cannot terminate thus suddenly in man. for as his body is an elaboration of the refined elements of all below, so his spirit reaches out of itself and expands into the essence of all above.
