True is, that whileme that good poet sayd, The gentle minde by gentle deeds is knowne: Fuirie Queene.

A pilgrim bird from wilds afar With homely wing and simple lay, Would mount with Phobus' goldon car, And wander forth one summer day. Braving the mountain's giddy height,

And floods that laved its jagged side Aweary, now he'd cease his flight, And in the valley warble wide, Where the clear brook went tinkling by-Anon within the breezy wood, Where erst the Druid loved to hie,

And Dryades woo the solitude : The vine-clad steep-the mossy dell-The uplands, with rich fruitage teeming;
An I many a-spot by ford and fell
That he had pictured in his dreaming;

These did he search, in vain, to find X friendly nock where he night dwell; (Tho' some to him were seeming kind Their way did not a welcome tell.)

Pomabird! he sore bemoaned his fate: When chance disclosed a lily fair, Who, pitying one so desolate, Did courteously invite him there. She oped to him her weird domain-

A covert, where the Graces smiled; And sheltered from the sun and rain By tulip-tree and sumach wild. She spread for him a dainty feast Ambrosia fresh distilled from Heaven And wove for him a silken nest Of feathery down from thistle riven. And many, I ween, a gentle strain,

The bird for that sweet flower did sing; And h w she sought to soothe amain And cheer his lonely sojourning. Ah, happy bird! ah blessed flower! And they must part-and he must go Back to his own wild wood-land bower,

And she must him no longer know. Yet, no: for, as the timid rill Unbeeding yet the rushing tide Flows on, all placid, calm and still, By rugged pass and mountain side;

On, till within the ocean blue It cours at length its waters bright, Nor hee is what lands it passes through

But onward murmurs day and night; So, into the great ocean, he, or, mo the great ocean, ne,
Of song, his rustic verse will pour,
Whilst she, some charmed fay shall be,
Or listening Nereid—by the shore.

He can but whisper ere he part-"Bear him in mind when far away As he will wear thee in his heart! Carlisle, Pa., Sept. 4th, 1851.

All the patients recoveand to him alone it proved fatal. No help would help him. His eyeballs burst, and his sight was lost without remedy. He was about five-and-twenty years of age when he thus was bereft of the sight of the day. He was a young man of the highest promise, handsome in person, ardent, aspiring, and gifted with rare faculties for his profession. He was ambitious; and visions of future fame and greatness had, as brilliant stars, beckoned him onward. To be, from these sunny heights, cast down and shut up in the ubyss of utter darkwas to be buried alive. So he felt it. Life was to him a blank, and worse than a blank. seemed to waste away.

"It must not be so!" said to him, one day, kind and carnest friend; "it must be otherwise with you! Come, let us go into the country, among forests and birds and people there, ing of life than this close and smoky city.-Come, I am going to see my relations in Wirmland, and that is about a hundred miles from here; come with me, -- be my companion; we will make friends with nature and men, and forget all our sorrows." to the continue of

He went away, and Charles waited half an hour, and then another, and yet another half hour, and still the friend did not come back .-Impatient and anxious, the blind young man began-to walk about the house, feeling his way with his stick. He found his way out in the vestry, and hearing light footsteps on the stair case, he called out, and asked who was there. "Who is it that calls?" answered a young female voice. ... The blind man named himself, his condition, is friend and anxiety about him.

"Charles A.!" repeated the voice; "oh, hen you are my cousin, and If have heard of ou, and, I dare say, you of me and my famiy, though we have never seen one another .--My name is Maria W. My father and myself are on our way home to our country place in the vicinity of this town after a journey of some weeks. Permit me to lead you to my father's room, while we make inquiries for your friend. Charles' hand was clasped by that of Maria and he was led by her to her father. Inquiries were made for their friend, which brought back the melancholy tidings that he had, in the street, been seized by an attack of apoplexy, taken into an apothecary's shop, and expired an hour afterwards without recovering

Maria felt as if a brother had been given to her whom she ought to comfort and care for: Her whole woman's heart was moved for the soliitary sufferer. She led him about in the forests and the green meadows around her home. She made him feel the fresh, sweet, perfumed air; made him smell the flowers of the field, listen to the birds and singing brooks. It was spring then, and the birchwood, putting forth s leaves, filled the air with fragrance. The kylark,—that wonderful bird which America, with her riches, and all her wonders, has not, -the lark, circling in the azure sky, made the pace ring with song; and every little rivulet in the fields warbled joyously, winding its way through mosses and grasses. Charles and Maria wandered hand in hand in that beautiful and expanded nature, as two beautiful and happy spirits. Then they were happy there, in the company of one another. Charles awakened to new life. Near Maria, he felt as if he saw the green fields, the sunshine, the blue sky that she saw. His sense of smell. his feelings, his ear opened with delight to the fragrance, the winds, the sounds which surounded Lim, like loving, ministering spirits. And the lovely girl, his faithful companion, shared and heightened still more every happy feeling. She brought to him the flowers, the grasses and mosses, and described them to him. He told her their names, their qualities, their life; told her much of the great, mysterious life in nature. In the evenings, she read to him, or he played to her on the piano; and that talent, which he had early acquired, leveloped itself at once with a power and eauty which was a surprise as well as delight o himself. The harmonies of life, of creation, which now dawned upon his soul, were embodied in his music, and his soul seemed to rise and expand on itsawings. Even his intellect ual powers acquired new strength, and tho'ts and words came to him which made him a poet. His health, ais strength came againhe was again, though deprived of his eyes

Then came a crash which threatened to destroy the innocent happiness of the two lovers-for lovers they were though they had never said nor thought of it Maria's father died, and his creditors seized upon his fortune. All debts being paid, nothannuity, scarcely enough for her support. "What shall we now do?" said Charles and with a smile, which only served more to added: "I can only play for you!"

"And I shall work for you!" exclaimed Maria, with a sudden inspiration and with blind god is here made the messenger of the cheerful firmness she went on: Charles, we must not part. I shall work for you, for us both. I can-I will. When I was very young cian, with the Swedish army, when that, in the I used to make dolls representing our peasanyear 1841, with threatening movement entered try in different provinces in their provincial costumes, and other toys for children, and had them sold at the fairs to procure me some needle money beyond what my father allowed me, and it was astonishing how much I made the camp. And I have the feeling that I shall succeed, red, but he himself finally caught the disease, and by that means get a livelihood for us both; Then we must not part."

"Maria, my sweet companion, my dear Maria, how good and noble you are! But I cannot consent! No! I cannot be so selfish. You must not, in the bloom of your life, be chained to the destiny of a blind, man; indeed you must not. Ah! if I were not poor, or if I were a man that gould support you, oh, then, how blessed should I be with you! But now, infirm anable—"

"Be still, Charles! Speak not so. You know better! You say I must not. Charles, ness, was a dreadful shock to such a mind. It you know I must! You must feel that, separated from you, I never more could be happy : that life would be worthless to me if I cannot His active soul preyed upon itself. And the devote it to you, serve you, love you! When Libear your muand see if they will not give us a better feel- sio, all mysteries in heaven and earth seem disclosed to me; all care seems, so little, all goodness so great, and every discord of life is solved in harmony. And is that nothing, to impart such life, such delight? Ah! say rather that it is nothing that I can do for you. I can work for you; -yes, and cherish you, The good friend carried his point, and went and load you as your servant or your dog. But gladly will I take up my humbler part, and thank Him that has appointed it to me. Charles let us both thank Him and obey Him, for He has given you to me, and me to you, as help

TAKE CARE OF YOUR FEET. Of all parts of the body, says Dr. Robertson, there is not one which ought to be so carefully attended to as the feet. Every person knows from experience that colds, and many other diseases which proceed from the "wheel of the system," that the circulation of the blood may be very easily checked there. Yet for all this although every person of common sense should be aware of the truth of what we have stated, there is no part of the human body so much fritled with as the feet. The young and would-be genteel-footed cramp shoes, in order to display neat feet in the fashtheir feet in thin-soled, pinching boots and ionable sense of the term. There is one great evil, against which every person should be on their guard, and it is one which is not often guarded against—we mean the change of warm for cold boots or shoes. A change is often nade from thick to thin-soled shoes, without effecting on the consequences that might ensue. In cold weather, boots and shoes made of good thick leather, both in soles and uppers, should be worn by all. Water-tights are not good if they are air-tights also; India rubber over-shoes should never be worn except n wet, splashy weather, and then not very long at once. It is hurtful to the feet to wear covering that is air-tight over them. and for this reason India-rubber should be worn as seldom as possible. No part of the body should be allowed to have a covering that enirely obstructs the passage of carbonic gas from the pores of the skin outwards, and the oderate passage of air inwards to the skin. Life can be destroyed in a very short time, by entirely closing up the pores of the skin .-

What a beautiful word is home. How often lo we hear it. I love to be at home where we njoy so many blessings and have so much happiness. Home is a place where our prayers are blended and mingled for they are borne to the skies. There we have thoughts of each other, and try to make it as pleasant as we can. We cannot always have a home and parents to take care of us, and while we possess both, we ought to be good, and never complain because our Home is not as richly furnished as some of our friends. We ought to try and make ås happy looks and joyful faces as we onn. It is not riches alone that makes us happy. I have known a great many rich persons that are very unhappy. Some people have no home to go to. How bad they must feel. No should be thankful that we are not in their laces. How we ought to love our home and our parents and ever be able to say "Home. Home, sweet Home!" We shall some day

A correspondent, however, tells us a story that, if we credit him, must lead us to the opinion that it was not allislander. He says that one of our sable brethren was passing through the streets a few days since during a thunder shower, when a flash of lightning struck him upon his head. He lapped his hand to the spot, and looking round him exclaimed, "I thought I hearn authin drap on my head!". His skull was so thick and hard that the lightning, unable to. rack it, passed off into the ground.
