the Ledger of the 4th: Within the past year the attention of a large number of persons in this vicinity has been turned to the breeding of chickens. The pure Shanghais, and other valuable fowls have been sought after, and the China market visited for a supply of the different species which are designated by the fanciers as the "real genuine imported." Sales have been at very high prices, and the amount now realized pays a handsome profit for the trouble and expense of breeding the fowls. The eggs of the pure stock command prices ranging from $7 to $30 per dozen, and the chickens from $10 to $50 and $80 per pair. The accommodations and arrangements for breeding, in some of the varie of the fanciers about the city, are good, and much care is taken in keeping separate the various kinds fowls, and different varieties of eggs and the brooding of them. The progressive spirit of the age demands greater facili ties for breeding, and, instead of realizing the stock in the natural way, steam and other agents are applied. The new methods have proved successful, and when they become more general, the impression is that fanciers will have a much greater desire to increase their stock than ispose of the eggs at any price. One of these fast breeding machines is in op-eration in West Philadelphia, at the es-tablishment of Mr. Robert A. Smith.— The principal agent is steam from man ure, which is thrown upon the top of the ovens. The ovens are made perfectly airtight, so that the smell arising from the manure is kept entirely from the broods, and the practical operation is witnessed without the least offensive odor. Mr. Smith first tried the experiment of breeding in this manner with one dozen eggs, and on the twentieth day some of the chickens were hatched; on the twenty-second day ten of the twelve eggs produced chickens. The ovens are so constructed that 1000 or 2000 eggs can be put in them at a time, which will probably produce a proportionate number of young chickens. In the hatching ovens a thermometer is placed, by which the heat, which is required to be about 97 degrees, is regulated. The manure, it is said, causes heat frequently to rise as high as 120 degrees; but a ventilator in the door of the oven is used to prevent the excess. The eggs are laid on cotton and, after being placed in the ovens, are left undisturbed until the chickens are hatched. A simple machine has been used by Mr. Keen, in West Philadelphia very successfully: Dr. James_McClintock, at his residence on the Frankford road, in Armingo township, has the most complete arrangements for raising chickens in the country. His collection is very fine, and comprises the pure Shanghais, Palmer importations of Shanghais Marsh, Perly, Forbes, Brahma, Pcotras Black Bantams, and the Imperial Chi nese, imported by himself. Each spe cies are kept by themselves in yards, some 20 by 50 feet, with houses coveniently constructed and dividedin different apartments, with nests for depositing the eggs for brooding, and for roosts. The utmost care is taken of the stock, and the buildings are cleaned every morning .-They have been thoroughly whitened by a preparation for that purpose and e verything is kept in the most perfect or-der and cleanliness. Dr. McClintock has the most extensive stock in the country and the pains he has taken with the fowls promises to be of much pecuniary adantage to him. Another sale of Shanghais took place at Woolbert's auction ronms, in Market street, on Saturday, which attracted a large company. The id were higher than any previous sales, as follows :-- Shanghais, per pair, brought $14,50, and Cochin Chinas $10 per pair.

An Ugly Editor.

"Bennett's portrait is terrific. Such a thing ought never to be painted or daguerreotpyed. It ought to be considered a penal offence to make anything so revolting to all our ideas of propriety. No man has a right to monopolize so much ugliness. If Bennett's ugliness could be distributed over a thousand faces, it wauld make each of them intensely, hatefully ugly. He ought not to be permitted to go into the street without a blanket over his awful frontispiece. No wonder that so many of the New York children die of convulsions, since Bennett is permitted to walk abroad with un-covered face. We once heard of a man's face that was so ugly that it was placed on andirons for the purpose of frightening children from the fire, with much etfect. No child dared approach the andirons, and the liability to combustion from such a case was greatly lessened. If Bennett's ugly likeness were stamped on fire-places, the effect would be decidedly bad, for the children would not dare to go near enough to the fire to keep warm. and would become frost-bitten and perhaps frozen to death. We cannot concieve of any reason why anything should be as ugly as Bennett. He is ugliness perfected. There is a thoroughness about his ugliness which defies competion. When Mirabeau described himself as a tiger that had had the small-pox, he placed a very uglyidea in everybody's mind, but it was beautiful when compar ed with Bennett's face. When Appelles made his beauty, his Venus, he took an eye from one woman, a nose from another, a mouth from a third, and so on untilthe Venus was complete in her more than earthly beauty. Now, if any Appelles, or artist of any appellation, wish es to make the most indubitably perfect representation of ugliness, he would not be compelled to take features from several very ugly persons, but all he would be compelled to do would be to get Bennett's face, and the enterprise would be accomplished."

He says his son told him he would go to Carroll's house on Thursday night and get the money, Lynch having gone to New York. He tried to disguade him from the robbery, but no mention was made of murder. His son told him on that night to go to bed, and he did go. The boy came home some time in the night and asked for a pocket book. He said he had the money. He went out in the morning and bought the shirts, but only gave him (Spring) a dollar note and a gold and he knew nothing of it till he was arrested. He closed with selemn asseverations of his own innocence and the guilt of his son. He was willing to die, but would die innocent. Judge Kelly rebuked the prisoner for his hardihood in persisting in such improbable statements when his moments on earth were numbered. He went over the history of his son and the evidence in the case to show how utterly false was all that he had uttered. He concluded by arging him not to die with a to clear the character of his son from suspicion.

Sentence was deferred, and the prisoner vicinity were densely thronged but no manifestation of feeling took place, though the crowd were evidently overjoyed at the result.
