THE ISLE AND STAR.

In the tropical seas,
There's a beautiful Isle,!
Where storms never darken
The sunlight's soft smile,
There the hymn of the breeze
And the hymn of the stream
As a mighal is one Are mingled in one, Like sweet sounds in a dream.

There the song-birds at morn, Like musical thoughts
from the poet's full heart.
There the song-birds at noon
sit in silence unbroken, Like an exquisite dream In the bosom unspoken.

There the flowers hang like ralnbows There the newers hang five rain On wildwood and lea—
Oh say, wilt then dwell in that sweet liste with me? In the depths of the sky There's a beautiful say. Where no cloud easts a shadow, The bright scenes to mar.

There the rainbows no'er fade,
And the dews are ne'er dry,
And a circlet of moons
Ever shines in the sky.
There the songs of the bleet
And the sengs of the spheres
Are unceasingly heard
Through the infinite years.

There the soft airs float down From the amaranth lowers,
All fresh with the perfume
Of Eden's own Howers,
There-truth: lowe and beauty
Immortal will be
Oh say, wilt thou dwell
In that sweet star with me?

STEPHEN GIRARD.

The following interesting reminiscence of Stephen Girard, is taken from the forthcom ing work of Vincent Nolte the great financier, and traveller:

REMINISCENCE OF STEPHEN GIRARD.

I cannot let this opportunity slip by without saying something of another mercantile celebrity of the United States, viz: Stephen Girard. This man was born in a village near the banks of the Garonne. He was the son of a peasant, and had left his own country as a common sailor. Having gradually risen to the post of second mate, he came as such to Philadelphia, where he remained and opened of his country-men as were engaged in the West India trade, particularly that with St. Domingo. The revolution in St. Domingo brought him fresh customers, and, having built some small vessels to bring his fugitive countrymen away in safety from the island, he bartered flour and meal for coffee, until his capital, which had been scarcely worth mentioning at first, gradually increased, and enabled him to build large vessels, and extend his spirit of enterprise in all directions. His frugality bordered on avarice. Sailor's fare was to him the best and the freighting of vessels his favorite pursuit. The success which attended his exertions at length became unexampled; for he never had his ships insured, but always chose skilful and experienced captains, thus saving himself the heavy expense of taking out insurance policies, and continued acting on this principle, gradually increasing his capital more and more, until it had finally swelled to an enormous amount. Illiteract, as a French common sailor must needs be, and scarcely able to write his own name, he called all his ships after the great authors of his native country, and thus enjoyed the sensation of behalding the American flag waving above a Montesquieu, a Voltaire, a Helvitius, and a Jean Jacques Rousseau .-His ships, which he was in the habit of sending successively to the island of Mauritius, at that time the Isle de France, to Calcutta and Canton, and each of which cost from forty to sixty thousand dollars, brought back cargoes worth from one to two handseld thousand dollars to Philadelphia, and thence to Europe particularly to Messrs. Hope & Co., at Amster dam, and were never insured. Remarkable good fortune attended all these enterprises. Until the year 1815 not one of his ships was ever lost or captured. It will be easy to form an idea of the amount of capital accumulated by this saving of insurance premiums, when one reflects that the latter went as high as from ten to fifteen, and even twenty per cent."

Girard's right-hand man was a countryman of his, named Roberjeot, who, however, had received his mercantile education entirely at Hamburg, under the tutelage of Professor "Busch. This Roberjot was the only man whom he now and then, and only now and then, took into his especial confidence: and he had worked in the house of Girard for a respectable, yet very moderate, salary during the lapse of twenty years; frequently some thing was said about increasing it, but nothing of the sort was ever done. Roberjot, who had some desire to be taken care of in his old age, resolved to let his patron know that if he desired to keep him any longer, he kerchief, or the lady, vowing, that if God must take that matter into serious considerations him strength, never to touch, taste or tion and give him askandsome sum, that he handle into hating orinks.

might put aside and turn to good account. Girard, a little nettled by this, replied that he would give him ten_thousand dollars, but Roberjot demanded sixty. He was told to wait until the next day, and, when, without thousand dollars.

things, he was, on the other hand, equally petty in many others. Of his numerous relatives in France, who were all poor peasant folks, he would never hear a syllable mentioned. When some of them upon one occasion ventured to cross the ocean and visit him in Philadelphia, he immediately sent them away again, with a honors and glory gathered thick upon his trifling present. In one particular instance brow. he exhibited unusual hard-heartedness. His captains had received the strictest orders not to bring either strange goods, passengers, or letters back with them. One of his ships was returning from Bordeaux, and by another, which had hurried on before it, he learned that it was conveying him some relations of his as passengers; he instantly sent to Newcastle, on the Delaware, where the ships coming in from sea usually touch, an order to the dishes of the choicest and most solid food.had been procured to take them back to Borlars, to marry the brother of General Lalletle of Waterloo. In his will be bequeathed authority, to gulp every thing with railroad to the other an equal sum.

Mr. Z. Large-Sir: Please send a few mere bettles of your "Fit Medicine;" I may not need it, but think safer to keep it on hand. Your-medicine has done wonders, I gave it to Miss. Jano Dolano; she has had fits for 2c years, brought on by having the measels when but four years old, which sould not be brought out to the surface. After taking the medicine a few days, she had a fits or symptoms almost daily. She and her father concur with me in saying that we believe the medicine has a will work a perfect cure. I also gave the medicine has a will work a perfect cure. I also gave the medicine has a will work a perfect cure. I also gave the medicine has a will work a perfect cure. I also gave the medicine to Miss Jane Henderson and Aris Carly, who have had fits almost daily, for a number of years. Their fits have ceased, and I believe the medicine will have the desired effect. Much money has been expended by the friends of the above patients for dectoring, all to no purpose.—
