A BRAVE LITTLE BOY.

. I love a brave boy. I don't mean a rash boy, who rushes into danger without thinking. Nor do I mean a blustering boy, whose words are larger than his deeds. But I do mean, a boy who never shrinks from dangers which he must meet, who keeps cool when most boys would get excited, and who fixes his mind more on the best means of getting out of a bad fix than on the trouble itself .-I have read of such a boy lately, and I will · tell you what he did.

This boy's name is Geise. He lives at Grosse Isle, near Detroit, and is about seven years old. A few weeks since he was on the dock, when seeing a storm coming up, he took refuge under the deck of a sail-hoat belonging to Mr. F. W. Backus, lying at the dock, with the sail hoisted. In a moment after, the squall struck her, when she broke from her moorings, and started toward the were heard on all sides!

Still the gallant-back held her way; again she went about, and took her course toward Malden, and again her brave young pilot was plainly seen standing at her helm. By this time a boat had been manned and put off to the rescue; but before getting any distance into the river the sail-hoat took another turn, heading again toward home; she ran straight to the middle of the river whom Mr. E. tle time the boy was in the arms of his mother, who had been an almost distracted tie spectator of the whole scene. In answer to a question of how he was getting along when the gentlemen boarded the boat, he answered, that he was pretty wet; but added-"Wasn't it lucky, Mr. Backus, that I was aboard of your boat when she went off?"-W. C. Advocate.

Acrs or Love.-Each one of athousand acts of love costs very little by itself, and yet when viewed, altogether, who can estimate their value?

The child whose good offices are always ready when they are wanted, to run up stairs or down, to get chipse or rock the cradle, or run on an errand and 'right back,' and all with a cheerful look and pleasant temper, has a reward along with such good deeds.

If a little girl can not take her grandfath or on her lap as he takes her on his, she can get his slippers, or put away his book, or gently comb his thin locks; and whether she thirms of it or not, these little kindnesses that come 'from a loving heart, are the sunbeams that lighten up a dark world .- Child's
