Beef vs Veal.

Great and just complaints are being made at the exorbitant price of beef, of late years, a cure for which is discoverable in the following judicious suggestions?

"In less civilized countries, such as Brazil, more wisdom is exhibited than with us, for it is a penal offece to kill cilves there, and that is one reason why that country is always so able to furnish us with hides for our leather, and tallow for our candles and soap. Our farmers, were they wise, could furnish all the hides we require, but because we are absurdly fond of yeal-yery unhealthy meet at best-and because our farmers are so blind to their own interest in selling and destroying their calves, our country has to send abroad for hides and tallow, and the working classes in our cities have to suffer for the want of proper food. It has been 'estimated that 43,000 calves were butchered and consumed in New York alone last year. Look at what a quantity of beef these would have supplied, if they had been raised and fed for four years. Allowing each to have attained a weight of only 300 lbs., it would have amounted to 12,900,000nearly thirteen million pounds-which would furnish every man, woman and child, in New York or Philadelphia, with one pound of beef every" day for three weeksy whereas it only furnished a like amount of each of poor yeal for about three days. These facts account for the rising price of beef. The remedy is for farmers to raise their calves."
