ENVY.

BY W. T. D.

Deep down in the dark recesses of the soul, hard by the chamber of ambition, and forming, as it were, a minaret to the passions, this most despicable attribute in man, is located.

An honest man will not maintain the heresy; since the experience of every one, on the slightest reflection, teaches that it lurks in him. That its action is unequal in individuals, is unquestionable; but this is true of all the other principles of the soul; and the man must be insentient, who is destitute of Envy.

Who is there, that will deny it to be difficult to behold superior merit with an eye of satisfaction and tranquility? Has the reader ever beheld an individual possessed of a mighty intellect, without feeling—to say the least—a desire to attain to the same?

When Envy is once excited, where are the limits to its action? It is not at all presumable that it will exist for any certain period and then become extinct.

In observing the general qualities of man, there is none of which we would rather believe that the great in intellect would be devoid, than this. Its seeming insignificance and its air of innocence, causes this belief; but under the same deceptive mantle, the most wicked and dangerous enemies to peace and happiness steal into the bosom of man.

It is no doubt better to sleep at night, as Nature ordained; but if sleep cannot be had then, it should be had when it can be, as we eat our food when we can get it, if we cannot get it when we first want it.

ONE OF THE HUSBANDS.—A little incident occurred at the fire yesterday morning, showing the strength(?) of a husband's affection for his wife.

Never mind, said the doating husband, 'go on with the water.'

At a large fire, 'recently held' at a fine forte maker's, an instrument worth one thousand dollars was burnt; it was inlaid with mother-of-pearl and other costly decorations.

Miscellaneous.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS ON SLEEP.

So much has been written and published on sleep, and it is a something so familiar to all, that it may seem absurd that any one should think of making suggestions in regards to it.

Early to bed and early to rise, is no doubt an excellent maxim for those who can observe it in this work-a-day world. But late to bed and early to rise, is not exactly the ticket; yet more practice than observe the wiser maxim.

There is no doubt that a vast deal of dissipation grows out of proper care to take sufficient sleep, or from the necessity among the poor of working from early dawn till far into the weary night.

Six hours' sleep in twenty-four is not enough for any healthy man; and we boldly assert that no man taking no more than six hours' daily rest, ever did or ever will die at a very advanced age.

We are happy to be sustained by Dr. Hall, in our ideas in regard to sleep. In his 'Journal of Health' he says: 'Sound, connected, early, refreshing sleep, is as essential to health as our daily food.'

'Sound, connected, early, refreshing sleep, is as essential to health as our daily food. There is no merit in simply getting up early. The full amount of sleep requisite for the wants of the system should be obtained, even if it requires till noon. I go to bed at nine o'clock the year round, and I stay there till I feel rested; but I do not go to sleep again after I have once awaked of myself, after daylight. I remain in bed until the feeling of tiredness goes off, if there is any, and I get up when I feel like it. I do not sleep in the daytime; it is a pernicious practice, and will diminish the soundness of repose at night.'

It is no doubt better to sleep at night, as Nature ordained; but if sleep cannot be had then, it should be had when it can be, as we eat our food when we can get it, if we cannot get it when we first want it.

'Nature is ever busy, by the silent operation of her own forces, endeavoring to cure disease. Her medicines are, air, warmth, food, water, exercise, and sleep. Their use is directed by instinct, and that man is most worthy the name of physician, who most reveres its unerring laws.'

VIRTUE IN MAN.—We love to believe there is more moral goodness than depravity in human nature. When we see one tear of pity drop from the eye, it gives us more pleasure than would the finding of a diamond.

over the sterling traits of character? We hold this to be the true doctrine; to portray real goodness and hold it up to the gaze and admiration of all, while we suffer the evil to remain in the shade and die.

AN INCIDENT.—A few days since in one of the neighboring towns, a little boy of two summers was standing in the middle of the road, bestowing a very low bow upon a great roan faced cow, when he lisped forth in the sweetest infantile accents 'Thank zu, pretty moody for making pleasant milk for me.'

'Thank you pretty cow who made, Pleasant milk to soak my bread.'

Was not the sweet child, as he stood bathed in the bright sunlight, and bearing the impress of God's fashioning hand so plainly visible, the dawning mind which looked forth from those bright blue eyes reading an instructive lesson to 'children of a larger growth,' who receive all life's common blessing, so ungratefully?—Boston Jour.

An Irishman had one child buried in the old country and one in this, and in a spirit of economy he thought one tombstone might answer them both. So he erected one with this inscription: 'Here lies my two children dear, One in old Ireland and 'tother here.'

BOUNTY LAND BILL.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the U. States of America in Congress assembled, That each of the surviving commissioned and non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates, whether of regulars, volunteers, rangers, or militia, who were regularly mustered into the service of the United States, and every officer, commissioned or non-commissioned, seaman, ordinary seaman, marine, clerk, and landsman in the navy, in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged since seventeen hundred and ninety, and each of the survivors of the militia, or volunteers, or State troops of any State or Territory, called into military service, and regularly mustered therein, and whose services have been paid by the United States, shall be entitled to receive a certificate or warrant from the Department of the Interior for one hundred and sixty acres of land; and where any of those who have been so mustered into service and paid, shall have received a certificate or warrant, he shall be entitled to a certificate or warrant for such quantity of land as will make, in the whole, with what he may have heretofore received, one hundred and sixty acres to each such person having served as aforesaid: Provided, The person so having been in service shall not receive said land warrant if it shall appear by the muster rolls of his regiment or corps that he deserted, or was dishonorably discharged from service.

Provided further, That the benefits of this section shall be held to extend to wagon-masters and teamsters who may have been employed, under the direction of competent authority, in time of war, in the transportation of military stores and supplies.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That, in case of the death of any person who, if living, would be entitled to a certificate or warrant, as aforesaid, under this act, leaving a widow, or, if no widow, a minor child or children shall be entitled to receive a certificate or warrant for the same quantity of land that such deceased person would be entitled to receive under the provisions of this act, if now living: Provided, That a subsequent marriage shall not impair the right of any such widow to such a warrant, if she be a widow at the time of making her application: And provided, further, That those shall be considered minors who are so at the time this act shall take effect.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That in no case shall any such certificate or warrant be issued for any service less than fourteen days, except where the person shall actually have been engaged in battle, and unless the party claiming such certificate or warrant shall establish his or her right there to by recorded evidence of said service.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That said certificates or warrants may be assigned, transferred, and located by the warrantees, their assignees, or their heirs at-law, according to the provisions of existing laws regulating the assignment, transfer, and location of bounty-land warrants.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That no warrant issued under the provisions of this act shall be located on any public lands, except such as shall at the time be subject to sale at either the minimum or lower graduated prices.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That the registers and receivers of the several land offices shall be severally authorized to charge and receive for their services in locating all warrants under the provisions of this act the same compensation or percentage to which they are entitled by law for sales of the public lands, for cash, at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. The said compensation to be paid by the assignees or holders of such warrants.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act, and all the bounty-land laws heretofore passed by Congress, shall be extended to Indians, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the said Indians had been white men.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That the officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war, or their widows or minor children, shall be entitled to the benefits of this act.
