Cleansing Bark of Fruit Trees.

This operation should be performed in early spring, as well as in midsummer. The rough, loose parts of the bark should be scraped off, as well as moss and other parasites. The bark should then be covered with the following mixture, as high as the operator can reach, with an ordinary long handled white-wash brush:

Five pounds whale oil soap, 1 pound salt, 1 pound fine sand, 2 pounds potash, 2 ounces nitrate of soda, dissolved or mixed with water to the consistency of cream, and thoroughly rubbed upon the bark.

Many kinds of insects are kept from trees by a solution of whale oil soap alone, and many such as are resident in the crevices of the bark, are destroyed by salt. The fine sand is intended during the rubbing to scratch the outer coating of the bark, and thus assist the other ingredients for more perfect action.

If the above mixture is applied in dry weather, it will become so hard as to remain during several showers, and thus have time to perform its office.

Trees with smooth bark, such as the plum, many of the cherries, &c., should be rubbed with a wet woolen cloth in a few hours after applying the mixture; this rubbing will cause the sand to clean the surface so perfectly as to give the bark an improved and more healthy surface.

Trees so cleansed, are not as likely to be revisited by insects as those left with natural surfaces, nor are they as likely to become bark-bound.

We have never known a tree to exhibit the disease called the bark-bound, the surface of the trunk of which had been softened by soap wash in early spring. The cherry, apricot, peach and nectarine are subject when left in their natural state, to this disease, and it has been usually attributed to too rich or too moist a soil; and under draining and cutting the bark lengthwise with the knife are the usual remedies.

Early Vegetables.

The attention of those who appreciate the luxury of fine early vegetables, should now be directed to the preparation of hot-beds, &c., in order to have fine, large plants of the various kinds ready for transplanting as soon as the soil shall prove sufficiently dry and warm. All know, who have had a moderate share of experience in horticulture, that tomatoes, peppers, and many other kinds of vegetables, may thus be produced several weeks earlier in the season than when the seeds are first planted or sown at the usual time for gardening.

Early planting, and careful attendance while young and delicate, contribute largely to the productiveness of nearly all kinds of vegetables. Those who cannot conveniently manage to have a hot-bed, can most of them easily have a few boxes or pots placed in a window exposed to the sun by day, and so protected as not to freeze by night.

Spring Draining.—Digging drains in early spring, though it may have the disadvantage of too much moisture, has the great advantage of usually being done without half the labor, from the loose, porous condition of the ground. Good leading drains can be made, by digging about 18 inches deep, and 18 wide.
