The winding up of a romance in real life has recently taken place in the quas -official world of Par's. Thus runs the story: At a Court-Ball, some twenty years since, a young officer of the French cavalry met, and was charmed by a beautiful English girl. He obtained an introduction, and danced with her as often as he could, without challenging the remark of His Grace, the young lady's papa Our here was handsome, amiable, witty, and in every way a person to win the good will of the fair sex He was of good family, and had the aristocratic de affixed to his name, although he could houst no patrimonial estate.

The young lady was of England's privileged class both noble and wealthy. This, however, our lover did not know when first be bowed before the charms of her beauty. Love begets love, and women are grateful; and the fair girl returned the young soldier's devotion. They met of en-how or where we cannot say: but Paris is large, and English customs are convenient for young people. This was oll charmingly agreeable, but unsatisfactory; for theirs was a flirtation with a serious inten tion affixed to it-marriage!

At length our heroine discloses her wisher to her parents. They are horrified; their daughter marry a Frenchman, merely a Lieu tenant, a man without estate! It is not to be thought of. She listens to this decision it tears. A first weakness passed, however, s. feels Nature's dictate and the strength which love gives! She next boldly and firmly de clares to her parents, that she loves the young officer with her whole heart, and him alone will she marry. That if they will not permit her to judge of her own happiness, she car wait till she is of age, when the clergyman may marry them without parental leave.

My Lord and My Lady are made conscious that their fair and gentle daughter has a will of her own, and also a patient determination to gratify that will. They come to a parley, and enter into negotiations with the young

The lovers are to be separated for two years -it shall not be considered an engagementand the young lady shall receive the addresses of other suitors.

On the other hand, the lovers are to be per mitted to correspond, and if they remain lovers at the end of two years, they shall marry with full consent and approbation.

The young lady consoles her anxious lover with assurance that her love is unchanging, and that two years' absence will only serve to prove their affection for each other, and endear them to one another still more.

They parted. The English party returned home. During a month they exchange letters duily -and such letters! Of what a length, and how full of terms of endearment! How poor language seemed to them!

But, one day, our fair heroine listened in vain for the accustomed postman's knock, so well known to every Londoner. He came not. The rext day passed, and the next-and no tidings; and thus many days passed, and tidings; and thus many days passed, and brought disappointment only. Weeks length ened into months, and no letter cheered the sick heart of the poor girl. The third month came round, and her hope became faint; then My Lady" consoled with her daughter, upbraided the young soldier, and urged the acceptance of Lord——, a suitor for her hand. "It was thus that a true English heart should resent an insult." Three months more passed. Meanwhile, the unhappy damsel writes letters, and sends them in every possible way, in the hope of obtaining an explanation of the Marietod for living together Affectionately and Happily. 30 cents. None comes; doubt becomes conviction—she is deserted. She stifles the love in her heart, and pride comes to aid her self-respect. Having no longer a desire of her own, she yields to that of her mother "My Lady, I will marry Lord but since I have so decided, let us be married quickly."

It was done. Fifteen years pass by. Our heroine is a widow! Five years more, and "My Lady" lies ill unto death.

She calls her daughter to her bedside, and confesses that she had detained the letters of the young officer-that he had been faithful: The proofs of it were by the hundred in such a desk. "My Lady" dies. Our heroine seeks these letters of the lover of her youthful days, and finds heaps of his, and also those she had written, in the vain hope of obtaining explana tion of his silence. Twenty years of disappointment were forgotten in reading the expressions of affection and devotion which they breathed. She was young again, and her heart had known no care; it was again the spring time of her life. She took these letters with her, and went wrote to the General that she was at Paris, and desired to see him. He obtained leave of absence, and hastened to meet the lady. All is explained, and our lovers are married. To be sure, the General is no longer young; but his manners have the same charm, and his elegance and style lessen his apparent age. The lady carries her inadmissible forty years as if they numbered but thirty. The latter twenty years of their lives are likely to b happier than either of the first.

And so ends a real life romance, that is very ike one in a story book.

FIRST OYSTER-EATING.

The North British Review for February, has a most humorous and withal a valuable article on "Diet and Dress," from which we extract the following:

It has often been said that he must have oeen a bold man who first ate an oyster .--This is said in ignorance of the legend which assigns the first of oyster-cuting to a very natural cause. It is related that a man walk ing one day by the sea-shore, picked up one of these savoury bivalves just as it was in the act of gaping. Observing the extreme smoothness of the shell, he insinuated his finger between them that he might feel their shining surface, when suddenly they closed upon the exploring digit with a sensation less pleasurable than he anticipated. The prompt withdrawal of his finger was scarcely a more natural movement than its transfer to his mouth. It is not very clear why people when they hurt their fi. gers put them to their mouths; but it is very certain that they do; and in this case the result was most fortunate. The owner of the finger tasted oyster-juice for the first time, as the Chinaman in Elia's essay having burnt his finger, first tasted cracklin. The avour was delicious, -he had mada a great discovery; so he picked up the oyster, | orced open the shells, banqueted upon their contents, and soon brought oyster-cuting into fashion. And unlike most fashions, it has never gone, and is never likely to go out.

IMPORTANT TO FEMALES!

DR. CHEESEMAN'S PILLS.

The combination of ingredients in these l'ills is the result of a long and extensive practice; they are mild in their operation, and certain of restoring nature to its proper channel. In every instance have these l'ills proved successful. They invariably open those obstructions to which Females are liable, and bring nature into its proper channel, whereby health is restored and the pale and deathly countenance changed to a healthy one. No female can enjoy good health unless she is regular: and whenever an obstruction takes place, whether from exposure, cold or any other cause, the general health immediately begins to decline, and the want of such a remedy has been the cause of so many consumptions among young females. To ladies whose health will not rermit of an increase of their family, these pills will prove a valuable acquisition, as they will proven pregnancy.—Headache, pain in the side, palpitation of the heart, leathing of food, and di turbed sleep do most always arise from she interruption of nature; and whenever that is the case, the pills will invariably remedy all thert evils. Nor are the less afficacious in the cure of Leucornhea, commonly called the "Whites." These pills should never be taken during pregnancy, as they would be sure to cause a miscarriage. Warranted purely Vegetatile, and free from anything injuricus to life or health. Fulland explicit directions accompany each-box.

These pills are put up in square that boxes. Personresiding where there is no agency established, by enclosing One Bollar in a lotter, pre-paid, to Dr. Cl. Charsey MAN, No. 267, Illecker street, New York, can have them sent to their respective addressive by mail.
