Manuring Fruit Trees.

The Dutch who are admirable gardeners, had in the Great Exhibition an itstrument called the 'Earth Borer' for manuring fruit trees without digging the ground. A circle of holes is bored around the tree at two feet distance from he tree, and a foot from each other.-Taking a tree to be a foot diameter at the surface of the soil, the circle will be tive feet in diameter and fif een in circumference; and if the holes are three inches diameter and a foot apart-fifteen inches, there will be about twelve holes; more or less, according to the trees.-They are about eighteen inches deep where there is enough depth of soil) and dauting towards the centre; are filled with liquid manure, diluted more or less in dry weather, and stronger as the weather is wetter. For the time of application, Dr. Lindly tells us (Gardner's Chronele, Feb. 21, 1852:)"For fruit, the propper time for using liquid manure is when the fruit is beginning to swell, and has icquired, by means of its own surface, a power of suction capable of opposing that of the leaves. At this time liquid manure may be applied freely and continued from time to time as long as the fruit is growing. But at first sign of ripening, or even earlier, it should be wholly withheld. If liquid manure is applied to aplant when the flowers are growing the vigor which communicates to them must also be communicated to the leaves; but when leaves are growing unusually fast, there is sometimes a danger that they may rob the branches of the sap required for the nutrition of the fruit; and if that happens, the latter falls off. And we all know, that when ripening has once begun, even water spoils the quality of fruit although it augments the size, as is sufficiently shown by the strawberries prepared for the London market by irrigation; great additional size is obtained, but it is at the expense of flavor, and any injury which mere water may produce, will certainly not be diminished by water holding ammonical and saline substances in solution." I am not aware that this information has made its way into our orchards, finding no allusion to it in any of our books on orchard-management, nor at our agricultural meetings. The time is just coming for putting it to the test, and it remains with the fruit growers to see what profit they can make of it. They need, in these times, all they can get, and this method has the recomendation of requiring little outlay,

Raising Potatoes.

if any .- Mark Lane Express.

MR. EDITOR:-As the time for planting this esculent root. the potatoe, is near at hand, it may not be out of place to make a few remarks upon its culture. From my experience in raising potatoes I am convinced that the middle planting as it is called is the surest of making a good crop. I know that much depends on the weather; if it should happen to be dry at the time the potatoe vines are in blossom and the potatoe about forming, we cannot expect much of a crop; but if planting at a certain season, the rains ar, more ant to suit the potatoe, it should be our duty to endeavor to plant our potatoes at that time. I have however, generally divided my time of planting into three periods; the first as early in the spring as it will do, sometimes by the first of April and sometmes later according as the spring is forward or backward. At this planting, I put in about one-fourth of the patch. The next of middle planting, is done about the 25th of April, at which time I put in one-half of the whole patch; and the last planting is done from the fifth to the tenth of May, when I put in the remaining one fourth. It sometimes happens that the first or last planting turns out the best; in case this happens, I am sure of a part of a drop being good. But as the middle planting is generally better than the others, I plant double the quantity at that time. My reasons for making three divisions in the crop are obvious, and I think the best that can be adopted.

As I have now stated my time of planting, with my reasons for so doing, I will proceed to give you the best manner of this, it is best to sow clover with the oats and leave it lay over until the next spring, instead of plowing up the oats stubble and sowing with wheat. The portion of this stubble intended for potatoes, should be enclosed with a temporary fence, and the remaining part may be pastured .-Give the clover sod a good coat of manure or apply four hundred pounds of Guano per aere. If manure is used, it should be rake i in on the potatoes, after they are dropped; if guano it may be sprinkled in the furrow, and in both instances plowed under to the depth of four inches. The potatoes should be planted in every other furrow. After the potatoes are planted, a good rolling will be of an advantage, as it will level the ground, and fill up the small hollows.

A clover sod is superior to any other kind I have ever tried; and to obtain

When the potatoes are just coming through the ground should be thoroughloosend up by using the square harrow on it. As soon as the potatoes are large enough, not to be covered up, the cultivator should be used, by taking out the two back teeth, and running twice on a row. Continue this every few days until the vine begins to fall. The plow is of no advantage, as it throws the dust to the potatoes, and leave a furrow between the rows, so that when it rains, the water runs in the furrows, and is thus kept from the roots of the potato.

If this plan is followed, it is hardly possible to fail having a fair crop. Some plant pumpkins with their potatoes, and raise a considerable quantity of them; but probably it tends to draw the virtne of the soil from the potato.

Another very essential point in the raising of potatoes, successfully, is that of changing the seed every five or six years. They like almost every thing else, follow the course of nature, and degenerate when planted in the same soil for any considerable length of time. In proof of this, I will give one instance, ony. A neighbor about ten years ago, was fortunate enough to secure a smooth kind af Mercer, which wheu first planted yielded very we'e, so much so that all the neighbors bought of him and planted .-Where they have bought within two or three years, they still raise fine crops, fully equal to when first introduced: while lor the last two or three years, he has not had more than half a crop; therefore they want changing .- Germantown Telegraph.
