A BEAUTIFUL STORY.

Little Folks.

In coming down the North River, I was seated in the cabin of the magnificent steamer I snac Newton, in conversation with some friends. It was becoming late in the evening, and one after another, seeking repose from the cares and cares and toils of the day, made prepara tions to retire to their berths. Some, pulling off their boots and coats, lay themselve down to rest; others, in the attempt to make it seem as much as possible like home, threw off more of their clothing-each one as his comfort, or apprehension of danger, dictated.

I had noticed on the deck a fine looking lit tle boy of about six years old, following a man around, evidently his father, whose appearance indicated him to be a foreigner, probably a German-a man of medium height and respectfully dressed. The child was unusually fair and fine looking, handsomely featured, with an intelligent and affectionate expression of countenance; and from under his little German cap fell his chesnut huir, in thick, clustering beautiful curls.

After walking about the cabin for a time, the father and son stopped within a few feet of where we were seated, and began preparations for going to bed. I watched them .- The fa ther adjusted and arranged the bed the child was to occupy, which was an upper berth, while the little fellow was undressing himself. Having finished this, his father tied a hand kerchief around his head to protect his ourls, which looked as if the sun-light from his young happy heart always rested there. This done. I looked for him to seek his resting-place; but instead of this, he quietly kneeled down on the floor, put up his little hands together, so beautifully childlike and simple, and resting his hands on the lower borth, against which he knelt, he began his evening prayers.

The father sat down by his side, and waited the conclusion. It was, for a child, a long prayer, but well understood. I could hear the murmuring of his sweet voice, but could not distinguish the worls he spoke. But what a scene! There were men around him-Christian men-retiring to rest without prayer; or, if praying at all, a kind of mental desire for protection, without sufficient courage or piety to kneel down in a steamboat's cabin, and, bcfore strangers, acknowledge the gootness of God, or ask his protecting love.

This was the training of some plous mother. Where was she now? How many times had her kind hand been laid on those sunny locks, as she had taught him to lisp his prayers?

A benutiful sight it was, that child at prayer in the midst of the busy, thoughtless throng. He, alone, of the worldly multitude, draws nigh to heaven. I thank the parental love that taught him to lisp his evening prayer, whether Protestant or Papist, whether dead or living, whether far off or nigh. It did me good; it made me better. I could scarce refrain from weeping then, nor can I now, as I see again that sweet child, in the crowded tumult of a steamboat's cabin, bending in devotion before his Maker.

But a little while before I saw a crowd of al miring listeners gathering about a company

I looked in the direction he indicated, and there, to my astonishment, I saw arriving carts coaches, cabs and wheelbarrows, and each, conained a tombstone. A regular fight ensued at the entrance to the churchyard, and engaged in the fight I recognized the relations of Mr. Jordan. Heavens! how they cuffed each othof Italian singers, in the upper saloon-a mother and two sons, with voice, harp, and violin, but no one heeded, no one cared for the child at prayer.

When the little boy had finished his evening devotion he arose, and kissed his father most a Testionately, who put him into his berth to rest for the night. I felt a strong desire to speak to them but deferred it till morning. When morning came, the confusion of landing prevented me from seeing them again. But if over I meet that boy in his happy youth, in his anxious manhood, in his declining years, I'll thank him for the influence and example of that night's devotion, and bless the name that taught him to pray.

Scarcely any passing incident of my life ever made a deeper impression on my miud. I went to my room, and thanked God that I had witnessed it, and for its influence on my heart. Who prays on a steamboat? Who train their children to pray, even at home ?

THE MOTHER,-It has been truly said,-"The first being who rushes to the recollection of a soldier or a sailor, in his heart's difficulty, is his mother. She clings to his memory and affection, in the midst of all the forgetfulness and hardihood induced by a roving life. The last message he leaves is for her, his last whisper breathes her name. The mother, as she instils the lessons of piety and filial obligation into the heart of her infant son, should always feel that her labor is not in vain. She may drop into the grave-but she has left behind her an influence that will work for her. The bow is broken, but the arrow is sped and will do its office."

Date pound of gold may be drawn into a wire that would extend round the globe. So one good deed may be felt thro' all time and even extend its consequence into eternity. Though done in the first flush of youth, it may gild the last hour of a long life, and form the only bright spot in it.
