

"Never Forget your Mother."

The editor of the Lawrence Courier, referring to the death of the Hon. John Davis, remarks, that he owed much to the personal suggestion and advice of the ex-Governor, kindly and earnestly bestowed in earlier days, and adds: "The best counsel we received from him was characteristic of the man; it was on the look of a vessel that lay with loosened ribs and shortened cable, that we, still in boyhood, just commencing years of oil-and-hardship, received a parting grasp of his pure hand with these words—God bless you! Remember what I've said; and wherever you go, NEVER FORGET YOUR MOTHER!"

That last Bad Act

"That last bad act," so said a mother, as she stood over the corpse of her boy, who was brought home to her from the pond where he had been to bathe. She had charged him, on leaving home, not to go near the river, as the banks were steep and the current strong. But he disobeyed her and died in the dead. What a sad thought was that for the mother to carry with her, that her boy's last act was one of disobedience. It was a bad state in which to die. The last act was a deliberate breaking of the fifth commandment. And it was not strange that his mother should repeat mournfully, as she looked upon his lifeless form, "O, that last bad act!"

Any act we perform may be our last one; and there is no way to be sure of dying in the performance of good acts but by performing nothing but good ones.

Don't Overtask the young Brain.

Dr Robertson says the minds of children ought to be a little, if at all tasked, till the brain's development is nearly completed, or until the age of six or seven years. And will those years be wasted? or will the future man be more likely to be deficient in mental power and capability, than one is differently treated? Those years will not be wasted. The great work of nature is opened to the infant's and child's prying investigation; and from Nature's page may be learned more useful information than is contained in all the children's books that have ever been published. But even supposing those years to have been absolutely lost, which is anything but the case, will the child be eventually a loser thereby? We contend with our author that he will not. Task the mind, during the earlier years, and you not only expose the child to a greater risk of a disordered brain, not only, it may be, lay the foundation for a morbid excitability of the brain, that may one day end in insanity, but you debilitate bodily powers, and by so doing to all intents and purposes, the mind will eventually be a loser in its powers and capabilities.

"Father, said a boy to his paternal protector, a venerable Quaker, 'I can lick that chimney-sweep.' 'That may be all very true, my son; but if thee does, thee will get thy hands blacked in the operation,' was the wise council of the peaceable Friend. A council which every sagacious editor sees frequent occasion to follow.

If you know any thing that will make a brother's heart glad, run quick and tell it.
