'MY CIRCUMSTANCES, BUT NOT MY NAME.'-There was a dry old fellow, whose wit was the amusement of the residents of the south of Jefferson county. He was sitting one day in the medical men asked the mistress of these the village store: a gentleman who came in houses: thought he recognized a friend, and said:

'How do you do, Mr. Underhill?'

The old man said, - 'Sir, you have described my circumstances, but that is not my name."

The same old fellow called one day on the member of Congress elect; the family were at breakfast; there was a vacant seat, but the old man was hardly in a plight to be invited asked the man of physic. to the table. The following conversation took place:

'How do you do, Mr. ----? What is the news?'

Said the old man, 'Nothing much, but one of my neighbors gave his child such a queer | for his frolics with the girls, was reading name.'

'What was it?'

'Come and eat.'

The name sounded so peculiar that it was repeated.

"What, come and eat?" v'Yes, thank you,' said the old man, 'I don't care if I do,' and drew up to the table--Rome Sentinel.

How do you get along with your arithmetic?' asked a father of his little boy.
