ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

The Manchester, Mass., Mirror publishes the following story:

In the fall of 1847, a young man came to this city from a Northern county, in quest of employment in the mill. After weeks of uner! I decided upon that. And after all, successful effort, he became reduced to the nitiable necessity of disposing of his best clothes, in order to obtain means to liquidate that stranger a man-a man of somewhat his bills and seek employment elsewhere. After consulting about disposing of his clothes at auction, he returned to his boarding house dens my heart gave a great leap, for I to pick up the same; when the lady of the sidered it uncommonly likely that a lion house handed him a letter, directed to him in to draw forth my chivalry and extort her been left there by a boy; which, on being cons; although the circumstance that did | bills, with a note of hand for the same amount,

The work may not be desirable, but persevere, and in time it will lead to something better. In return for the money, you will please sign the accompanying note, which you will enclose in an envelope without direction, and with a penny for postage, request the Postmaster to place it in box

"A STRANGER." The note was made payable to bearer.

Though greatly surprised at such a timely favor from the hand of an entire stranger, he gladly availed himself of it, and, impelled by an irresistible power, he obeyed all the direc tions to the very letter. On application at tily descending the pole to secure his prey, the designated room, he found that the situation had been secured for him, through the earnest solicitation of a young lady, who was equally a stranger to the overseer, yet whose pleadings he could not withstand.

The whole transaction was so unusual, that after our here, by assidious devotion to his business, had secured the confidence of his overseer, he related to him the whole affair. and solicited his aid in endeavoring to obtain the name and whereabouts of his benefactress. He entered willingly in the plans, yet two years had passed, and the mystery remained rhaps fatal; for the bear loosed his hold, unsolved. True, his moral sense rebelled at first, against yielding up his affections to one while being so strongly under gratitude to another: but gratitude to the unknown was compelled to surrender at last to the captivating image of the known. He made expiation, however, for his gratitude by frankly confessing to his beloved what an-I hardly knew how I got over the inclosure, other of her sex had done for him, without solicitation, in the hour of his deepest neces-
