Agrienltural.

Chemical Combinatons.

Every farmer should know enough of chemistry, to toll the combination that forms the different vegetable creations. Every plant and every vegetable is formed of the same substances, only united in different proportions. All too, are forest med of only fifteen elements. The names of these elements we have often given; but as a valued subscriber has asked us, "What is the best way for a farmer of limited means, to acquire a knowledge of Agricultur. I Chemistry?" we will repeat what we have often said, by recurring to the first principles of Chmistry; and if our "subscriber," of Sullivan will learn this lesson fully, he will be prepared to be his own teacher afterwards, by experimental training.

The fifteen simple elements are oxygen, hydrogen; nitrogen, chlorine, carbon, potash, soda, lime, alumina, magnesia, iron, manganese, silex, sulpher, and phosphorus.

Some of these names may be better understood by calling them differently. Thus to call chlorine, muriatic acid, carbon, coal, or the part of a thing that will burn; alumina, clay; and silex, sandthey will perhaps, be better understood. The other substances are probably understood by their chemical names.

Now, by different combinations of these substances, are all other substances formed.—Thus oxygen and nitrogen form the air we brathe; uitrogen and hydrogen combined form ammonia, or hartshorn; chlorine and amonia combined form sal ammoniac; oxygen and sulphur form sulphuric acid; sulphuric acid and soda form glauber salts; sulphuric acid and magnesia combined form epsom salts; sulphuric acid and iron combined form green vitriol; sulphuric acid and zinc combined form white vitriol; sulphuric acid and lime combined form "Plaster of Paris;" oxygen and phosphorus combined form phosphoric acid; phosphoric acid and lime combined form bones, or phosphate of lime; oxygen and carbon combined form carbonic acid, (so fatal in rooms where burning coals are kept;) carbonic acid and lime form chalk, and limestone, called carbonate of lime; potash and aquafortis combined for a saltpetre; soda and chlorine combined form common salt .- Potash, soda, and amonia, are called alkalies, as they possess a sharp, bitter, burning taste. Potash is derived from ashes of land vegetables; soda from sea plants, and ammonia from animal substance.

Now, by these changes and combinations, all plants and vegetables, as well as animals are formed. Thus a stick of green wood is formed by the combination of oxygen and hydrogen; the sap or water, carbon or coal; and the ashes, or earthy matter, are drawn from the earth. By burning it, the water is changed back into the two gasses, and thrown off into the atmosphere. You have the coal, or carbon left. This though apparently dry, still contains water in the shape of oxygen and hydrogen disunited, and in a solid, dry form. Burn the carbon, or coal, and the balance of the oxygen and hydrogen is driven off, and the remains are earth. Analyse these ashes, and we shall find all of the fifteen elements, except theigases, which have escaped into the atmosphere. To ascertain the amount of gas in a stick of wood, weigh the stick and char it in a pit; then weigh it again, then reduce it to ashes and weigh them. In the first operation you get the weight of the gases united in the sap, which are thrown off; in the second the weight of the gases uncombined, existing in a solid state. So in lime, which united with carbonic acid forms limestone. A bushel of limestone weighs 142 lbs.; burn it and it weighs only 75 lbs., showing that 67 lbs. of carbonic acid and water have been thrown off: add 20 lbs. of water to it and it will crumble into dry powder weighing 93 lbs. showing that the change of 20 lbs. of water into solid dry substances, has been effected with a loss of only 2 lbs.

In annalyzing the ashes of wood, we find what earth is used in forming the plant, or tree. The apple tree shows a large portion of alkili and lime; the peach, iron; potatoes, potash; wheat, phosphato of lime; clover lime; and the cranberry, of potash.

When the farmer has got thus far, perfectly, he knows what composes his crops, and that his apple trees need ashes; the peach, iron scales; potatoes leach- april 11 the control of the second of the second of the
