The Prospect for Prices in 1856.

The Baltimore American says: "Some of the Southern papers are urging the farmers to put as much of their land as possible to wheat seed. The Lynchburg Virginian holds that wheat seeding in that State may be continued as late as the middle of December, as excellent wheat has often been made east of the Blue Ridge from December seeding. That high and remunerating prices in grain'will prevail next year the Virginian considers beyond a contingency, and yet, it adds, we do not believe from information received that an increased breadth of land, all commensurate with the prospective demand for and price of breadstuffs, has been put to seed in this portion of the State. Taking the lowest estimate of the deficiency of grain in England and France, the deficit for the two countries may be put down at fiftytwo million bushels. As this deficiency must be made up before the next harvest, the question arises. Whence are these supplies to come? It has been ascertained that the crops of wheat and rye throughout the whole of 'North Europe also are deficient, and especially in the Baltic provinces and the interior of Germany, where flour is at this moment selling at 70s. per sack. In fact, the importations of breadstuffs from these sources and all others, except the United States, including Denmark, Sweden, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and Egypt, it will probably be sufficient to meet the deficiency of 20,000,000 bushels in France. Canada and the Baltie provinces are not relied on for more than six or seven million bushels, and Italy-from which the exportation of breadstuffs has in fact been prohibited-together with Spain, Portugal. Egypt, and the provinces of the Danube, can scarcely do more than furnish the balance, of thirteen or fourteen millions, of the deficit in France. Hence, giving the surplus from these sources to France, there still remains there in England, ranging from a capacity of thirty to fifty millions of bushels, to fill. For this supply, say forty million bushels be obtained from this country, we shall send more grain to England than was exported in wheat and flour to all parts of the world during the year 1855. Our exportations for that year according to the New York Economist, amounted to less than twenty million bushels. The quota exported to England, according to the English Board of Trade returns, was an average of 976, 930 quarters, or less than eight million bushels per annum for the eight years from 1845 to 1853, inclusive.

"If, then, as has been assumed, the whole available surplus exported last year from the United States to every part of the world should be supplied to England, there of course will still remain a deficit And even should we be able to export this required amount, we shall be, as last year, without a surplus for home consumption at the close of the season and paying for that purpose prices as high as Liverpool. In conclusion, we will merely add the following importanf fact, as stated by the Virginian: Our harvest is, on an average, a month in advance of the harvest? of Europe, and will consequently come in next season just at that period when a deficiency will be most sensibly felt abroad, and, in fact, when prices, ruled by actual want, must be irrespective of the prospects from English or continental harvests."

It is now quite too late in the season. to talk about increasing the wheat cropof 1856. The extent of that matter was determined weeks ago. But the corn crop of the United State is more important than that of wheat. Besides the corn and meal exported, we put the worth of a few millions of dollars into pork, beef, lard etc., much of which comes

Between this and planting time next spring our farmers may calculate their chances for prices, and plant accordingly. There can be but little doubt, however, but what every species of grain and other agricultural produce will bring high pricestfor at least two or three years to come, and how much longer no one can predict with any degree of certainty. It will be perfectly safe for farmers to put in the coming spring all the corn they can manage. Spring Wheat for home consumption may also be grown with profit. Barley, oats, peas, beans, etc., will also insure good returns, and will, probably supply the place of winter wheat in many families. Therefore, if our farmers are vigilant, and get all things ready for extensive spring and summer crops, the whole country will be greatly benefited, and the old World supplied with BREAD.

Agricultural Improvement.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Canadas Farmers' High School of Pennsylvania, held at Harrisburg, last week, the plan of the institution was submitted and adopted, a building committee appointed to superintend the erection of the proper buildings, a treasurer elected, and a committee chosen to solicit from the present Legislature an appropriation to aid in the establishment of the institution. Will liam G. Waring, an accomplished hortiefflurist of Centre county; was appointed to lay out the farm, plant fruit trees, and superintend the horticultural department The Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society has appropriated ten thousind dollars towards the enterprise, and, with the subscription of ten thousand dollars guaranteed by the citizens of Centre county, and five thousand dollars bequeathed by the late Elliott Cresson, of Philadelphia, the institution will have a fund of twenty-five thousand dollars to begin with.

In his late annual message to the Legislature, Governor Pollock very properly dwelt upon the importance of paying more attention to agriculture, and to this end he suggested the establishment of an agricultural bureau in connection with some of the departments of State, with a view to securing more efficiency in the collection and diffusion of useful knowledge. The agricultural bureau of the Patent Office at Washington, is organized on such a basis, and has accomplished a great deal of good. But the agricultural industry of such an immense territory as that covered by the United States, must necessarily be too multifarious to patch be properly attended to by a single establishment organized on such a limited scale as the one at Washington. We should have one exclusively for our own State, and to accomplish that, it unst be connected with the government of the Commonwealth. Such an organization, familiar with the peculiarities of our climate, soil, staples, etc., would accomplish every year great and practical good, which is beyond the reach of the bureau at Washington .- North American.
