Open Questions Among Farmers.

It is yet an open questions among farmers, whether the Ayrshire, or the Devons, or the Durhams, or the Herefords, or even the natives, are the best cows for milking purposes.

It is an open question among them, whether the Suffolks, or the Essex, or a mixture of breeds make the most profitable swine.

It is an open question what kind of potatoes it is best to cultivate, and whether the seed should be large or small, and whether it should be cut or uncut.

It is an open question whether corn should be topped or cut up by the roots.

It is an open question whether common ploughing or deep ploughing is, on the whole the best.

It is an open question whether swardland, intended for corn the next year, should be ploughed in the fall or not, or whether it should be ploughed twice in the spring.

It is an open question, whether cornstalks should be taken into the barn before the juices are entirely evaporated, or whether they should remain in the field, exposed to all the rains of autumn, till they are "done up brown."

It is an open question whether potatoes liable to disease should be dug early or late in the fall.

It is an open question, whether manure should be kept under cover, that its ammonia may be retained, or thrown out to the action of the sun and rain, that those powerful disinfectants may deprive it of its offensive odors.

It is an open question, whether it is best to have a drain running from the barn-yard into the road.

It is an open question, whether green or dry wood makes the best fire; but when the mercury is ten degrees below zero in the morning there is little doubt in the mind of the "hired girl" who is compelled to make it, which she had rather have provided.

It is an open question, whether it will pay to dig and cart meadow mud, and compost it with stable manure for the crops next spring.

It is an open question, whether guano or artificial manure at their present high prices can be profitably used in New England.—New England Farmer.

Saving Choice Seeds.

The fact that we can get superior breeds of animals only from the very best and most perfect specimens, is so well established that no one doubts it, and thousands pay large amounts for the use or ownership of these superior breeds. Why should not the case be analogous in the raising of vegetables? Experience says it is analogous—that superior vegetables can be raised only from the most nature and perfect seeds. This the market gardeners in the vicinity of cities are well aware of, and govern themselves accordingly. To raise those fine vegetables, for which they can obtain almost any price—and prices always in advance of the market prices for ordinary articles, they use seeds in the production and selection of which the greatest pains have been taken. These superior seeds are raised by themselves or especially for them, they do not depend on seed-dealers for their supplies They save their more thrifty specimens of radishes, lettuce, parsnips, turnips, beets, carrots, cabbages, &c., &c., from which to raise their own seed. By doing this, year after year, most surprising improvements have been made in the size, flavor, taste and other qualities of many garden productions.

These facts, well known among market gardeners, and others, render it highly probable, or almost certain that in the case of all plants and all vegetable productions, improvements to any extent, or to an indefinite extent might be secured, if the practice of selecting only the best specimens and the best seeds was preserved in for a number of years. Some who have been at pains in this matter for a few years, have obtained such a reputation for superior kinds to various vegetables and grains, that they can obtain prices for their seed-corn, seed-wheat, seed-potatoes, and garden seeds, which are highly remunerative.—Some have obtained so much reputation for superiority, in field and garden products, that they can sell all they can raise at any price which they may ask.
