

Miscellaneous.

THE FROZEN DEAD.

The scene of the greatest interest at the Hospice of the grand St. Bernard—a solemn extraordinary interest, indeed—is that of the Morgue, or building where the dead bodies of lost travellers are deposited.

The snow fell fast and thick, and the hurricanes wound them both up in one white shroud and buried them. There is also a tall, strong man, standing alone, the face dried and black but the white unbroken teeth, firmly set and closed, grinning from the fleshless jaws; it is a most awful spectacle.

The Luzerne Horse Thieves.

We have received another letter from Mr. John Stewart, of Old Forge, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, giving us further information of the extensive gang of horse thieves whose headquarters were established there, and whose operations extended from this corner of our State to the central New York State line.

This break in their ranks arose from a correspondence with our paper, caused by our publication of a letter from Mr. Stewart, to Mr. Postmaster Linehart, at Carriek, in this county—since when Mr. S. has received numerous letters of inquiry relative to stolen horses from various States, and has found owners for four valuable horses stolen from Mr. George Sotterling, of Wilmore, Cambria county; David Sloan, and Johnston, of New Alexandria, Westmoreland county.

The thieves have a system of correspondence, and numerous stations on the route—extending from this neighborhood, by Luzerne county, in this State, at least as far as the Unadilla river, in Otsego county, New York; and the difficulty of convicting them is increased by their mode of operating, by which honest, worthy men, are frequently made witnesses in their favor; some scoundrel steals a horse here, and rides away; at some station on the route he publicly trades him for a horse in New York. Should either be arrested for stealing the horse found in his possession, he readily proves an alibi, and that he traded for him openly; and too often this defense, sustained by witnesses of good character, enables the scoundrel to escape justice.

In Luzerne alone, these honest horse dealers have disposed of more than fifty horses—many of them young and valuable. It is believed many of these may be recovered, if our exchanges will give circulation to these facts, and advise losers to send descriptions of the stolen animals to Mr. John Stewart, at Old Forge, Luzerne county, who has been the means of exposing the gang. Mr. Stewart, in his last letter, says:

Dr. Speer, then of New Alexandria, Pennsylvania, but now in the State of Missouri, had a horse stolen from him, in 1853, valued at $250. John Brown and John Rutter brought the horses stolen from Dr. Speer, and David Sloan to its place. Dr. Speer's, when it came was nearly dead, and did die two or three days after its arrival. The saddle and part of the bridle which belonged to Dr. Speer were found in the possession of Lewis Brown, who is now under one thousand dollars-bail. These circumstances will be fully proven at the next term of the Westmoreland county court, Mr. David Sloan having obtained competent witnesses who were in the employ of Lewis Brown at the time he received the stolen property.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

INTERPRETATION OF DREAMS.

There is a new guide to the interpretation of dreams. An English paper thus puts it: To dream of a millstone round your neck, is a sign of what you may expect if you get an extravagant wife. To see apples in a dream betokens a wedding, because when you find apples, you may reasonably expect to find pears.

THE DRUNKARD'S DAUGHTER.

That night I was out very late. I returned by Leo's cabin about 11 o'clock. As I approached, I saw a strange looking object cowering under the low eaves of a cold ruin was falling. It was late in autumn. I drew near and there was Millie wet to the skin. Her father had driven her out some hour before; she had hid down to listen for the heavy snoring of his drunken slumbers, so that she might creep back to her bed. But before she heard it, nature seemed exhausted, and she fell into a troubled sleep with the rain-drops pattering upon her.

THE FATE OF MUMMIES.—The mummies of Egypt are sometimes quarried by the Arabs for fuel, and, whether those of the Pharaohs, their wives, their priests, or their slaves, are split open and chopped up with the same indifference as so many pine logs. The gums and balsams used in embalming them have made them a good substitute for bituminous coal; and thus the very means employed to preserve them have become the active agents of their dissipation.

OLD BABYLON.

Dr. Oppert, of Franco, has spent two years on the site of Babylon, examining the cuneiform inscriptions on the bricks and slates. He states that this famous old city, in the days of its grandeur and power, covered rather more than an area of 200 square miles, being about two and a half more than the site of London. But all this space was not inhabited, there being immense fields to supply the city with corn and pasture in case of siege.

John Randolph was one of the most sarcastic men that ever lived. One time a young man attempted to make his acquaintance. He obtained an introduction, and among the first remarks said: "I passed by your house lately, Mr. Randolph."

The gentleman reminds me, said Randolph in reply, of the lands about the head waters of the Montgomery, which are poor by nature, and cultivation has entirely ruined them!

THE MAN THAT WAS BORN LATE.—An old Carolinian once said: "I was born the last day of the week, very late in the day, and have always been behindhand. I believe it would have been fifty dollars in my pocket if I hadn't been born at all!"

The Eleventh Commandment.

Good Advice.—The Hon. Edward Everett recently delivered an address to the pupils of the public schools of Boston which closed with this language: "Let your superior good fortune, my young friends, have no other effect than to inspire you with consideration and kind feelings towards your Schoolmates."

The celebrated Archbishop Upsher was in younger days wrecked on the coast of Ireland, at a place where his person and character were alike unknown. Stripped of everything, he wandered to the house of a dignitary of the church, in search of shelter and relief, craving assistance as a brother clergyman.

Romance and Reality.

The Sanluis Register narrates the following affecting story: In the Lunatic Asylum at Columbus is a pair of insane lovers. Mental anxiety of a peculiar character is supposed to have deranged the intellect of the young man, who was sent to the Asylum some time ago, cured, it was hoped permanently, and sent home.
