The Small Fruits.

There is both pleasure and profit in growing fruit. The farmer of course grows fruit, as he does wheat and corn, for profit. Yet, in addition to this profit, it furnishes his family with the most delicious luxuries the earth can yield The well kept garden is the home of beauty. To the sight, the smell, and the taste, the garden affords the highest gratification.-Those who reside in villages and in the suburbs of cities, cultivate fruit for the pleasure it affords.-There is enjoyment in planting, in pruning, in cultivating, in watching the buds and the blossoms, and the full ripened fruit To all, but more particularly, the latter class, we must recommend the cultivation of the smaller fruits, as affording the greatest amount of pleasure for the least means and space.

STRAWBERRIES, we place the first, because the earliest fruit to delight our appetites. The strawberry requires a good, deep soil; that is, a soil plowed or dug well rotted manures. The plants should be set about a foot apart each way, and kept free from weeds and runners. After the bed has been planted about two years, start another, and by the time this begins to bear well, the old one will be pretty much worn out. Those who plant for the market "would do well to plant in rows about two feet apart, and one foot in the rows. This allows of the cultivator between the rows. Strawberries may be planted during any of the spring months, and from the middle of August to the middle of September. If done late in the spring, or during the warm weather of August, a showery day should be selected.

RASPBERRIES .- This delicious fruit receives little of the attention its merits deserve. It succeeds the strawberry in riponing, and will well repay the best care. A cool, moist location on the north side of a fence or a slope is the best; and the soil should be rich and deep. The plants should be set out early in the spring, and be kept clean and well cultivated during the season. Each plant should have a stake three or four feet high firmly driven beside it, to which it can be loosely tied. Every spring examine the plants and cut out the old canes that bore the previous year, and trim out the young suckers so as to leave only six or eight canes in each stock Then take off about a foot of the ends of the shoots that are allowed to remain, and tie them up neatly to the stakes. In September it is well to pinch off the ends of each shoot. This will check the growth and help to ripen the canes. As the finer varieties of the raspberries are somewhat tender for our climate it is well to protect them in winter, and perhaps the best way is to lay down the canes in the fall; and cover them lightly with soil.—If a little earth is placed rear the roots on the side where they are to be bent down, there will be no danger of their breaking.

THE BLACKBERRY.—Considerable effort has been made of late, to improve the blackberry. The High Bush and the White Blackberry have both received some notice, but the only one that seems worthy of cultivation is the "New Rochelle or Lawton Blackberry." It was discovered in the fields at New Rochelle. on the Hudson river, and brought into culture. It was afterwards disseminated by Mr. LAWTON. It is perfectly hardy, and throws up vigorous, upright shoots, many of them over an inch in diameter, with lateral branches, all of which are covered with fine berries, a portion of them ripening daily, in moist seasons, for six weeks. They have been found so large that 72 filled a quart.

THE CURRANT.—This is perhaps the most valuable of all our small fruits. It can be used in so many ways, ripe or green, bears so abundantly, flourishes so luxuriantly under good care, and boars ill usage with such good grace, that we consider it Indispensable in every garden, - large or small, It may be cultivated either in the form of a bush or of a small tree, and all old and superfluous wood should be out out, and the suckers removed. Thorough manuring, with proper pruning, will produce you an abundence of fine currants. When the plants are six or seven years old they should be replaced by young ones. - Genesee Farmar. --

Setting Hens.

On this subject a corresponder writes us as follows: "Never allow your hens more than a dozen eggs to ancubate. A larger number is not desirable under any circumstances. When more are accorded, the hen, unless of very large size, will be unable to incubate them effectually, and loss will follow as a necessary and unavoidable result. Farnish a warm nest, and be sure to provide liberal feed, with a sufficiency of pure water from the well or spring. The apartment in which incubation is performed, should be dark and silent, and so secured from the intrusion of all other fowls and of vermin, as to prevent interruption or annoyance from any source. A nest of fine straw, well dried, or of woodland moss, is perhaps the best; it is elastic and warm, and retains heat without becoming humid -A spoonful of ashes sprinkled occasionally over the nest, or a few drops of oil applied to the neck and back of the hen, will tend to keep off vermin particularly those with which the hen, during the tedious and painful process of incubation, is most commonly infested.

"Eggs may be preserved for a long time perfectly fresh and sweet, simply by excluding them from the air, and reversing their position-daily. They may also be preserved by immersing them in a solution of salt in water, or by packing them in pulverised charcoal.-But when packed in dry substances, they should be turned over every day, and kept perfectly dry and free from moisture. - Ger mantown Telegraph.
