

Unprofitable Farming.

The following extract from an address by Mr. Greeley, before the Eric County Agricultural Society at Buffalo, contains some useful hints.

"The truth which I am most anxious to impress is, that no poor man can afford to be a poor farmer. When I have recommended Agricultural improvements I have often been told this expensive farming will do well enough for rich people, but we, who are in moderate circumstances can't afford it. Now it is not ornamental farming that I recommend, but profitable farming. It is true that the amount of man's capital must fix the limit of his business; in agriculture as min everything else. But however poor you may be, you can afford to cultivate land well, if you afford to cultivate it at all ... It may be out of your power to keep a large farm in a high state of cultivation, but you should sell a part of it and cultivate a small one. If you are a poor man, you cannot afford to raise small crops; you cannot afford to accept half a crop from land capable of yielding a whole one. If you are a poor map, you cannot afford to fence two acres to secure the arop you ought to grow on one; you cannot afford to pay or loose the interest on the cost of 100 acres of land, to get the crops that will grow on 50 acres. No man can afford to raise 20 bushels of corn per acre, not even if the land were given him, for 20 bushels per sore will not pay the cost of the misera-ble cultivation that produces it.

No poor man can afford to cultivate his land in such a manner as will cause it to deteriorate in value. Good farming improves the value of land-and the farmer who manages his farm so as to get the largest crop it is capable of yielding, increases its value every year.
No farmer can afford to produce weeds .- They grow, to be sure, without cultivation: they spring up spontaneous ly on all land, and especially rich land; but though they cost no toil, a farmer can't afford to raise them; the same ele-ments that feed them, would, with proper cultivation, nourish a crop, and no farmer can afford to expend on weeds the natural wealth which was bestowed by providence to fill his granaries. I am accustomed, my friends, to estimate the christianity of the localities through which I pass by the absence of weeds on or about the farms. When I see one covered with a gigantic growth of weeds, I take it for granted that the owner is a heathen, a heretic, or an infidel; a Christian he cannot be, or he would not allow the heritage which God gave him to dress and keep, to be so deformed and profaned. And to make an application of the above remark, I must say, there is much missionary ground between New York and Buffulo. Nature has been bountiful to you, but there is a great need of better cultivation. To prevent the growth of weeds, is equivalent to enriching your land with manure; for to retain in it the elements of which crops are formed, is as profitable as to bring them there. It is better that wee should not grow at all; but when they exist. and you undertake to destroy then it is economy to gather them up and carry them to your barn yards, and conwert them to manure. You will in this manner restore to your farms the fertility of which the weeds had drained it. "Farmers cannot afford to grow-a crop on a soil that does not contain the natu ral elements that enter its composition When you burn a vegetable, a large part of its bulk passes away, during the process of combustion, into the air. But there is always a residue of mineral matter, consisting of lime, potash and other ingredients, that enter into its composition. Now the plant drew these materials out of the earth, and if you attempt to prow that in a soil that is deficient in these ingredients, you are driving an un auccessful business. Nature does not make vegetables out of nothing, and you canno expect to take crop after crop off from a field that does not contain the elements of which it is formed. If you wish to maintain the fertility of your farms, you must constantly restore to them the materials which are withdrawn in cropping. No farmer can afford to coll his ashes. You annually export from western New York a large amount of potesh. Depend upon it, there is no-body in the world to whom it is worth as it is to yourselves. You can't afford to sell, but a farmer can well afford to buy ashes at a higher price than is paid by anybody that does not wish to use them as a fertilizer of the soil. Situated ea the farmers of this country are, in the in the neighborhood of a city that burns large quantities of wood for fuel, you should make it a part of your system of furning, to secure the askes it produces. When your teams go into town with loads of wood, it would cost comparative by little to bring back loads of ashes and within fertilizers that would improve the productiveness of your farms.

No poor farmer can afford to keep poor fruit trees that do not bear good fruit is always valuable and should be raised by the farmer, no tion in his own family, . As more enligh tened views of diet prevail, fruit is des-simed to supplant the excessive quenti-ties of animal food that are consumed in this country. This change will produce hetter health, greater vigor of body, ac-tivity of mind, and elasticity of spirits and Loannot doubt that the time will counties of excellent froit; for generally sure of the formers, instead of putting down the large quantities of meat, they do at present, will give that attention is autumn to the preservation of large quanties of excellent froit; for generally sure of the following summer. Fruit will not then appear on the table as it will not only as desert offer the down doss now, only as a desert after dinper but will come with every meal, and be reckoned a substantial aliment.

FLOWERS IN HEAVEN. BY MISS C. W. BARBER. "Where is that radiant shore?"
Shall we not seek it, and weep no more?"
MRS. HEMANS

I sat alone in my school-room. The little I sat alone in my school-room. The little busy beings who had sat about me all day had taken their dinner baskets upon their arms, and trudged off over the hill, in the paths which led to their several homes. paths which led to their several homes.

My desk was strewed over with withered wild flowers. Some were the offerings of infantile hands, while others had been brought in by the botanical class for analysis. In the recitation of that class I had dwelt a longer time than I was wont, upon the beauty of the vegetable world, and the goodness and wisdom of its Creator. I spread before them the beautifully tinted corolla of the field lily, and showed them its thread-like stamens crowned with golden anthers, and stamens crowned with golden anthers, and its curious pistils. From another wild flow-er, I drew the delicate and nicely notched calyx, and explained to them its various uses, and asked if man with all his boasted uses, and asked it man with all his boasted powers, had ever planned or executed anything one-half as lovely.

I turned over the pages of God's Holy Word, and read a description of the riches of Solomon, "who yet," il continued, "in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

"Will there be any flowers in Heaven?".

Breathless interest pervaded the little group.

"Beautiful things," I replied, and if flowers can add anything to the beauty of the golden courts we shall surely find them there."

"Oh!" said she, "I hope the angels will year toreaths of them; I am sure I shall love better to look upon them and hear them better to look upon them and hear them

In the last City Council of Philadelphia, there was a gentleman of this kind, who though a very useful man in many ways in that body, was an inveterate speech-maker. During one of the meetings a very excited debate arose on some railroad question, in the course of which he made a severe attack upon another member, charging him with heing "the prima donna of the whole affair." A laugh here greeted his ears, where upon he exclaimed, "Gentlemen excuse my Latin—I don't often use it."

The general want of success in treating diseases of the liver and stomach, has not been a deficiency of pathological knoyledge of their functions—but of a suitable compound that would act upon the disease and all the sympathetic affections. That has been gained in those littlers: and, they can be used by persons with the most delicate stamach with perfect safety—as they at no time debilitate the patient, but, give strongth and increase, that nervous inergy. They can be taken at all times, and under all circumstances. No ordinary exposure will prevent them having a salutary effect, and no bad effect can result from an over dose.

If patients will persever in the use of this remedy, and use it strictly according to directions, it will cure the foregoing diseases in ever, tastence, if not beyond the power of medicine: Whas caused many to only the blossing of rease we chealth, and in many despread and abandraned cases, a perfect and rudical curo.
