ENRICH THE SOIL -- It should be the object of every tiller of the soil to leave his land in good condition after the removal of aporop, and, at the same time obtain as remunerating returns as possi-ble. This can be done only by husbanding all the sources of fertility upon the farm, and adding thefeto in every available manner .- This is the Alpha and Omego of progressive agriculture.

CARBOTS .- Land for Carrots should be plowed early; plowed again, and again, and again, or sny once in every two weeks, until the 15th of May. It should be plowed very deep each time, and left without harrowing. This will kill sever al crops of weeds, will serve to warm the soil, and your carrots, when sowed, wil. grow in advance of the weeds, and thusave labor in hoeing. $\cdot \gamma$

_____ CHILDREN EDUCATED FOR SOCIETY.

BY REV. R. W. BAILEY.

The cultivation of the social principle should be made the subject of special edu-cation in the young. They are made for society, and will find it. The choice of com-panions in early life is very liable to be capricious, yet it does much in giving direc-tion to habits, and in forming character. Here is a most important field for the internotice is a most inportant next i.e. Send a child into the street from a virtuous fireside, and unadvised; he will soon be sought out and led away by the most noisy, vicious and pro-fane. He will be like'y to keep the ne-quaintance thus formed, and the heart of quaintance thus formed, and the heart of many a parent has wept over the disgrace and rdin of a sou or daughter, who has fal-len through their instruction, who had en-tered into unprofitable intimacy with a street. acquaintance, or perhaps been initiated into a vicious course by a servant in the family. Send a young man-to-college who has no knowledge of human character, and no whole-some rules given to guide him in the selec-tion. of his company, and a similar result tion of his company, and a similar result will be very likely to reward the parent's negligence or presumption. Apprentice a boy to an imprincipled master to learn his boy to an unprincipled master to learn his trade, or to pursue a business inder such a direction, he will return to his father's house with all the vices of his companions. Send a girl to a bourding school, to be associated and companioned as chaired may provide for her, and parents must not be surprised if they are disappointed in their favorite. Children should be early taught to estimate the true value of society. They will not find all they expect from the world, and will meet with much that they do not anticipate. Hence, they are sociated to cherish a spirit of misanthropy, and universal disspirit of misanthropy, and universal dis-trust. Again, they cultivate such associatrust. 'Again, they cultivate such associa-ciations and feelings, that they are readered miscrable without a continued variety and change of society. Here is a field for the diligent band of parential culture. 'A well-balanced mind is, to a great extent, the re-sult of education; of discipline, and the 'equipoise of its operation depends much on the direction of its firm impulse. The fa-mily is the natural and appropriate sphere for the development, education and matumily is the induction and appropriate space-for the development, education and matu-rity of the social principle. The judicious sarent, who feels the responsibility of his ltation as a tencher in his family, will not
