There's a song of the olden time,

Falling sad o'er the ear,
Like the dream of some village chime,

Which in youth we loved to hear. And even smidst the grand and gay, When music tries her gentle art, I never hear so sweet a lay,

Or one that hangs so round my heart,
As that song of the olden time, Falling sad o'er the ear, Like the dream of some village chime. Which in youth we loved to hear.

And when all of this life is gone, E'en the hope ling'ring now, Like the last of leaves left on

Twill soun as still those friends were Who loved me in youth's early day, If in that parting hour I hea The same sweet notes, and die away, To that song of the olden time, Breath'd like hope's farewell strain. Life and youth shall shine again!

Interesting Shetch.

GETTING A WIFE BY BEING POLITE A sailor, roughly garbed, was sauntering through the streets of New Orleans, then in n bad condition from recent rains and the rise of the tide in the Mississippi river, which sometimes overflows its banks and deluges the streets of the city, rendering them, for a tinte, almost impassable to pedestrians .-Turning the corner of a much frequented street, our hero observed a young lady standin a perplexity at the edge of the pavement, water between her and the opposite sidewalk with no very satisfied countenance. The sailor paused, for he was a great ad mirer of beauty; and certainly the fair face That peeped out from under the little chip hat and the auburn curls hanging glossy and unconfined over her muslin dress, might tempt a curious or admiring glance. Per plexed, the lady put forth one little foot to try the depth and make the effort to cross over, when the gallant sailor, with charac Teristic impulsiveness, exclaimed:

apparently measuring the depth of the muddy

"That pretty foot, lady, should not be soiled with the filth of the street; wait for a moment and I will make you a path." So, springing past her into a carpenter's shop, he quickly bargained for a plank that stood by the doorway, and coming back to the smiling girl, who was just coquettisl enough to accept the services of the hand some young sailor, he bridged the narrow black stream, and she tripped across with a merry "thank you" and a roguish smile that made her eyes dazzle like diamonds.

'Alas I our young sailor was perfectly electrified. The words had made a commotion in his bosom, and the smile had set his brain to recling. He was completely charmed. He caught up the plank and shouldering it followed the little witch through the streets to her home. She twice performed the ceremony of "walking the plank," and each time rewarded him with one of her eloquent smiles. At last she reached her home, and he saw her lightly trip up the marble steps of a palace of a house, and disappear within its resewood entrance. For a full moment he stood looking at the door, and then, with a heavy sigh, turned away, disposed of his draw-bridge and returned to his ship. The next day he was astonished with an order of promotion from the captain. Poor Jack was speechless with amazement. He had not dreamed of being exalted to the dignity of second mate's office on board one of the grandest ships that graced the harbor of New Orleans. He knew he was competent to fill this or even a higher station, for instead of spending his money for amusements, visiting theatres and bowling alleys. as sailors generally do on their return from sea, he purchased books and became quite a student; but he expected years to intervene before his ambitious hopes would be realized. His superior officers seemed to look upon him with considerable leniency, and gave him many a fair opportunity of gathering marine knowledge, and in the course of a year the handsome, gentlemanly young mate had acquired unusual favor in the eyes of the portly commander, Captain Hume, who had first taken the smart little black-eyed fellow, with his neat tarpaulin and tidy bundle, as cabin boy.

One night the young man, with all the officers, was invited to an entertainment at the captain's house. He went, and to his astonishment, mounted the identical steps upon which, two years before, had tripped the bright vision he had never forgotten Thump went his brave heart as he was ushered into the parlor; and like a sledge hammer it beat again, when Captain Hume introduced his blue eyed daughter, with a pleasant smile, as "the young hidy once indebted to your politeness for a safe walk home." His eyes were all a blaze and his brown cheek flushed hotly as, the noble captain sauntered away, leaving the fair Grace Hume at his side. We will not recount what transpired, and the attentions paid by our hero, all so kindly received by the modest Grace, but will only reveal the fact that the gallant sailor and the lady he had learned to walk the plank" became very intimate during the evening, and it was accorded by the entire company that they were the handsomest couple present.

Only a year from that time the second mate trod the quarter deck second only in command and part owner with the captain, not only of the vessel, but a sharer too in the affections of his daughter, the gentle Grace Hume, who had always cherished the warmest feelings for the bright eyed sailor. The homely but earnest act of politenes towards his child had pleased the captain and, though the youth knew it not, was the cause of his first promotion. He had been observed by the father as he left the daugh ter at the mansion to which he afterward returned in triumph to peap the laurels of a virtuous and honorable deed, not performed amid the excitement and carnage of the field, but in the quiet walks of life, where true heroism emanates naturally from the hearts nature's noblemen. The old man has now retired from busi ness; Harry Wells, our " Juck Tar" hero, is now Captain Wells, and Grace Hume, according to polite parlance, is Mrs. Captain Wells, In short, our honest snilor gained rank, honor, wealth, influence, and a wife worthy his affection and protection, all by a single act of politeness, to which he often refers with pleasure, and laughs when, in tell. ing his adventures, he comes to the part in which Grace "walked the plank."

A CAUDLE LECTURE REVERSED.

The following is "rich, rare and racy," is a capital hit at some husbands, and may be read profitably by all who are inclined to. find-fault-where there is no fault: - "A placefor everything and everything in its place," is a rule that would prevent many lectures were it practiced more. But just hear Mr. Candle : "

"Now, Mrs. Caudle, I should like to know what has become of my hat? Here I've been hunting all over the house, and lost ten minutes that should have been given to the Mutual Life Insurance Company. Now. I say, what have you done with that hat? You have not seen it? Of course not; never do see it. Frank, go and get my hat, and Jane, fetch me my cane. What's that? You can't find my hat? Now, Mrs. Caudle, I should like to know why you will persist in training your children in such a heedless manner? He can't find my hat! To be sure not; how can he'if you don't learn him to look? Did I not leave it in the kitchen when I went there last night after something to eat? How the deuce should you know? I say it's your business to know, and to have my things all ready for me in the morning, and not have me losing so much time. Eh! you have too much else to do? Of course you have, with three servants and two children! Be calm! O yes, I will be calm ! You see I am calm, and if you would only be so, I should have been able to find my but long ago, instead of staying here to listen to your excuses, when I ought to be down town attending to business. I wonder how you expect I'm to keep this house going, if I'm to be kept waiting here for my hat. What! how can you help it? -How can you help it? Why, Madam, its the easiest thing in the world ! It's simply this modern management. Now, do you suppose things would go on in this way, if you, would only see that articles are in their right places; but, I suppose, you haven't got time to de that even! Of course not. Well, there is no use talking, I must go to the office bareheaded. Your bonnet, madam! Your bonnet! But why should I be surprised-why should I be surprised if you should offer me your skirts also, since I seem To have lost all authority in this house? It's not your fault! and pray, then, whose fault is it? I will repeat it over twenty times if you wish it whose fault is it? What I the servants? No, ma'am; I tell you, you are mistaken-it's not the servants-I tell you it's your fault. I wonder who oversees the servants-who, madam, but you? Then, it's clearly your fault that I can't find my hat. (Sits down.) Well, it's no use talking-I shan't go to the office to day, and you, ma'ain, and -Eh! What! You wish I wouldn't talk so much? I tell you I will talk-I'll talk all day, if I please, and smoke too-d'ye hear that? I'll smoke in the dining-room, and yes, by Jove, I'll smoke in the parlor, and by Jove, ma'am, I'll scent the curtains, and I'll smoke all er the house." SOMETHING THAT LOVES US. We all want love-it is the world's great need. Think what a heaven earth would be, if love was the law of nationa! No publica Ro fights or private souldbles, no dissimulation Wild Wes no backbiting, no unhappiness at home and limited. Wild Western Seenes—A Narrative of Advonture or in the Western Western William (Paper, Octs.—Cloth) 100 abroad. "Something to love me!" cries out the human soul, no matter how high or low its station. If it finds no responsive heart, no kindred thought, it will cling to baser and kindred thought, it will cling to baser and state of the state kindred thought, it will cling to baser and more perishable things. It will twine itself about honor or ambition; and it will fasten on Music and Musical Instructions, for sale by the own attributes, and fatten when its own attributes, and fatten when its own its own attributes, and fatten upon its own frailties, until it is degraded from an upright image into a grovelling worm. It will cherish gold and gold's power, and learn to love even the mothesten chest and rust-stained coffor that treasure up its heart's best riches.

"Something to love me!" is the world's great cry. It is better to have a dog to fawn upon and garess, than to come home to a great. silent house, where the dead faces of dead an-ening their lot. There are plenty of poor children, deserted or left, by the storn beheat of death, to the mercies, of a merciless world ready to be loved. 'Go after them lovely woman-ye-whose hearts are not brightened by the roses and glee, the smiles, aye, and even the tears of children. Go, bring them to your homes; let them nestle on your bosom, and see how beautiful it is to be loved. And nothing loves so purely, so truly, so tenderly, as helpless infancy. Ambition may deaden other loves, and the thorns of the world's pleasure choke them; but the love of little children, is an upspringing well, always bubbling freshly, whitely and spontaneously over the rock of the flower. It matters not where they are placed, they must love.

Sometimes woman are laughed at because they pet lap-dogs, or cherish pussy cats. At this moment a pair of intelligent, dark eyes, so full of expression that they almost speak, are lifted toward us. Two silken cars droop at either side, white fleecy locks curl from tip to tail, four little feet with soft-wool stockings, pit-a-pat. Who can help loving our little dog, Willy? We could not blame any lady friend for an attachment innocent as this; for Willy's wild welcome-so joyous-so full of puppy-pleasure-might warm the coldest heartkindly towards him.

Something to love us ! -it is heaven's great boon. No one is utterly destitute of attino. tion that something or somebody does not make a home in the heart.

Yesterday we saw a coarse, ungainly we man, from whose face looked a sad serrow, and whose brogue told of her Erin birth place. And what, think you this woman, suffering from poverty and sometimes from abuse, had to love her? I'we of the sweetest twin babes that mortal eyes ever rested upon, with cheeks like peach bloom, eyes blue as heaven, and hair like bleached flax. No lady of the land, sur rounded by luxury, ever felt the press of more beautiful lips, the twining of softer arms. Something to love !- it is the world's great grant; and beaven, when our hearts are attuned to Gcd's holy will, give us sufficient for

With regard to the qualities of my planes, I confidently refer to the testimonials I am constantly reciving from Professors and Amateurs, speaking for theuselves and others, of the high appreciation is which my Instruments are always held, and which can be seen at my Warercoms. And this is the best and affort reliable assumine I can offer the customers, ippar from my own knowledge of the Instruments, that in jurchasing at my establishment, they are guaranteed the possession of a Piano, equal, if not superior, to any made in this country or Europe.

All Planes built at my Factory have full Iron Frames, heling so constructed as to secure great additional strongth, without affecting the rows, and therefore will stud in any elimate.

Planes made, to order, of any kind of wood, and with any style of fulish that may be desired.

The greatest care is bestowed upon my work, and the selection of the best materials; and overy Instrument turned out of my factory can therefore be fully wairanted as possessing all the qualities requisite for a good Plane.

All Instruments of my manufacture are also guaran-ranced as possessing all the qualities regulate for a good Plane.

All Instruments of my manufacture are also guaranteed for five years from the day of sale.

Particular attention is paid to the selection of Instruments for distant orders, and a province of particular area of any time within six months from the day of sale, should such Instrument not give entire satisfication. satisfation.
