GRAFTING THE GRAPE VINE .-- We have met with many experienced persons who have never seen the grape vine grafted .- The process is so easy that thousands who are anxious to possess the newer varieties should especially take care of their old roots and insert scions of the new. No clay or covering of the grafted part is nec-essary, beyond the natural soil, below which the graft is to be inserted.—Saw off your stock and put in your scion with two three buds, wedge-fashion, as in the cleft grafting of fruit trees, and then cover up a few inches, leaving one or two buds above ground; where the stock is very large and inconvenient to split a gimlethole, so made as to bring the two barks together, answers. The sprouts of the old stock, as they spring up to rob the graft, must be pulled off. Grafts often bear some fine clusters the first season growth, and many more the second. In this way the old stocks of wild grapes removed from the woods are very useful with due care. We have lately seen an old Catawba vine that was wanted for shade forty feet off laid down, for a year till it had rooted well, and then was graft ed with perfect success, and fruited the first season .- Horticulturist.

To Keep a Horse's Feet and Legs Sound.

The author of "The Horse's Foot---How to keep it Sound" (a little English work,) in a late number, of the Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society, con-• u les a paper on the subject of Horse snoeing as follows:

"If I were asked to account for my horse's legs and feet being in better or-der than those of my neighbors, I should attribute it to the four following circum stances: First, that they are all shod with few nulls, so placed in the shoe as to permit the foot to expand every time they move; secondly, that they all live in baxes insteard of stalls, and can move whenever they please; thirdly, that they have two hours' daily walking exercise when they are not at work ; and fourthly that I have not a head stall or rack-chain in my stable; these four circumstances comprehend the whole mystory of keep ing horse's legs fine, and their feet in sound working condition up to a good old age."

"In regard to fastening the shoe-it is best allowed to 'expand to the weight o the horse, by placing three nails in the outer limb of the shoe, and two in the inner liml, between the toe and the commencement of the inner quarter; r larger number than five nails can never be required in any shoe of any size, or un-der any circumstances, excepting for the sole purpose of counteoacting defective and clumsy fitting."
